New Holland, PDA Mark 100 Years

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Gov. Tom Ridge on Tuesday visited the New Holland Inc. plant in New Holland to recognize the 100th anniversary of the worldwide agricultural machine and equipment company.

Along with Gov. Ridge, almost the entire Lancaster County political contingent was present, as were the mayor of the borough of New Holland and state Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius.

The afternoon observance was held in front of the company's technical center along George Delp Road. From a platform stage where all dignitaries sat, Ridge spoke about the leadership and innovation that New Holland Inc. has shown over the past 100 years.

The stage faced north toward a grassy ridge that created a natural area for the many hundreds of residents and employees who walked from the surrounding New Holland shops and plants to witness the celebration and hear the governor talk.

Introducing Ridge was New Holland president Tom Kennedy who quickly reviewed the growth of the company starting with a two man machine shop in New Holland in 1895 to the present global company with offices around the world and other Pennsylvania manufacturing facilities in Belleville and State College.

"We're proud of what we've accomplished," Kennedy said. "The main reason why we invited (Gov. Ridge) was to let him see first hand how (New Holland) contributes to the economy and strength of Pennsylvania."

Kennedy praised Gov. Ridge, crediting him with helping to reestablish a favorable business climate in Pennsylvania.

State Farm Bureau's Foundation Presents $25,000 Check

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.)—Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's Friends of Agriculture Foundation recently presented a check to sponsor 50 school teachers at upcoming "Ag In the Classroom" workshops sponsored by the Agricultural Awareness Foundation of Pennsylvania. The workshops will take place July 23-28 at The Pennsylvania State University.

"Ag in the Classroom helps elementary school teachers bring agriculture into their classrooms," said Richard Mains of Newville who serves as chairman for the solicitation committee of the Friends of Agriculture Foundation. "We're proud to be able to help teachers expand their curriculums to include agricultural awareness. Through them we can touch the lives of thousands of future citizens."

Mains said the Foundation's contribution would not have been possible without the support of many of Pennsylvania Farm

Vanishing Acres: Surrounded By Development, Farmers Face Tough Decisions

It's that attitude to move to the country to see the country that destroys the country.

If you want to have a farm, you have a farm. If you want to have housing, you have housing. The two don't work well together.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — While residents in the surrounding development were celebrating with food and fireworks on a July 4 evening, Tim Fritz was becoming, as he said, "concerned and irritated."

Residents were shooting fireworks into a herd of young Holstein cows and heifers on some pastureland that was hemmed in by new houses.

Editor's Note: While land development values continue to rise and farm income falls, the number of farmers who sell land to development increases. To adapt, farmers are under pressure to change their attitudes about neighbors, the land, even the very nature of farming itself.

The first of this three-part series examines the continuing difficulties and frustrations farmers face as development engulfs them.

TIPS TO IMPROVE EGGSHELL QUALITY...

Dr Milton Scott
Nutritional Consultant

"Look for insults"

A transparent "Electronic Egg" that lights on impacts that might crack or break an egg is a useful tool. Run it through the entire collection and processing system to locate points that are providing more than their share of insults

Sometimes cleaning or adjustment will eliminate or alleviate a trouble spot. But there will always be insults. Oyster shell is extra insurance that you'll have strong eggshells to help minimize the results of insults.

For details on the "Electronic Egg" and the use of oyster shells, contact The Fox Co , PO Box 708, Newfield, NJ 08344. FAX 609/697-1692, Phone 800/257-7022.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
JULY 12, 1995

Grain and soybean bids extended yesterday's gains. Wheat climbed higher on lower world wheat ending stocks forecast and a lower crop production figure for Kansas wheat. Corn and soybean bids soared due to hot, dry weather conditions in the Midwest and lower than expected ending stocks figures. Wheat 1 to 6 cents higher. Corn 2 to 4 cents higher. Sorghum 7 to 15 cents higher. Soybeans 5 to 9 cents higher. Wheat bids moved slightly higher in reaction to USDA's stocks report estimating ending wheat stocks for 1995-96 at their lowest level since 1975-76. Also, Kansas wheat production was estimated at 302.4 million bushels, down from 374.5 million previously released by USDA. Very little export business for wheat this week, limited gains. Advances in corn and bean bids were due to hot, dry weather in the Midwest and remains in forecasts through this weekend. Support also stemmed from reduced corn stocks estimate for 94-95. Lower ending bean stocks also strengthened bids as USDA estimated 325 million bushels, down from the 355 million reported in June. Export demand has remained very slow for corn and beans this week, despite indications China is seeking US corn.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

JULY 17-23, 1995

LAST QUARTER MOON, JULY 19.

ICE CREAM, YOU SCREAM!

July 23 marks the birthday of the ice-cream cone, born in 1904. Ice cream itself probably derives from the flavored "water ice" of 17th-century Italy. English colonists brought the sweet, frozen delicacy to America, where early settler made ice cream in pewter bowls set in ice and salt. The hand-cranked freezer was invented around 1846. Jacob Fussel took the process a step further, opening the first commercial ice-cream factory in Baltimore, Maryland, in 1851. The ice-cream soda came along in 1879, and then the ice-cream cone showed up at the World's Fair in St. Louis, Missouri, in 1904. Americans lead the world in their consumption of ice cream, with Australia and Canada close behind.

A smiling face is half the meal.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Fennel is considered a dietary aid in many old herbals. Consider some fennel tea if you wish to curb your appetite.

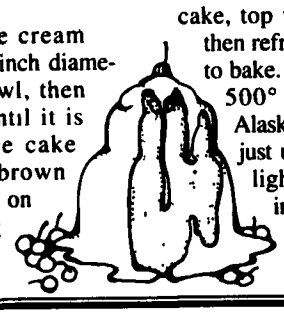
BAKED ALASKA

1 quart ice cream
1 baked 9-inch layer cake
Meringue:
3 egg whites
1/8 teaspoon cream of tartar
1/4 cup sugar

Mold ice cream in a 8-inch diameter bowl, then refreeze until it is firm. Place cake on heavy brown paper, then on a baking sheet or platter that can go from freezer to oven. Beat egg whites until stiff and gradually fold in cream of tar tar and sugar. Carefully unmold ice cream onto the cake, top with meringue, then refreeze until ready to bake. Preheat oven to 500° F. Bake the Alaska 3 to 5 minutes, just until meringue is light brown. Serve immediately.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.



The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

A rainbow in the morn,
Put your hook in the corn.
A rainbow at eve,
Put your head in the sheave.

Moss dry, sunny sky.
Moss wet, rain you'll get.

In summer, if the wind changes to the east, expect cooler weather.

When the thrush sings at sunset, a fair day will follow.

Tobacco Sucker Control

Our price is set by the quality ingredients we use and the special care we take in formulation. Off-Shoot-T is a premium product that delivers premium performance. University tests over a 5-year period prove that Off-Shoot-T helps produce an average increase of 86 pounds per acre, compared with popular "bargain" contacts. That's a bonus of as much as $135 an acre.

If we lowered any of our quality standards, we could sell Off-Shoot-T at a bargain price, but you wouldn't be getting premium performance. You wouldn't be getting Off-Shoot-T.

So if you are going to shop for a bargain this year, make sure it's a real Bargain-Off-Shoot-T.

And count on an increased yield that will more than pay back the few extra cents you spend for premium performance

1 Rain won't matter if Off-Shoot-T has been on over an hour If it has been on less than an hour you may need to reapply the chemical

Dark Tobacco: 6-8 ounces per gallon of water (This is one part Off-Shoot-T to approximately 16-21 parts water)

Maryland Tobacco: 4-4 1/2 onces per gallon of water (This is one part Off-Shoot-T to approximately 25-30 parts water) One gallon diluted product will treat approximately 190 plants

In university tests, and in the field, Off-Shoot-T sets the sucker control standards

OPINION

Immediate Call For Reform

In the aftermath of last week's Supreme Court ruling upholding federal rules requiring habitat protection on private land under the Endangered Species Act, the American Farm Bureau Federation pledged to secure stronger safeguards for private property rights when Congress revises the 1973 law.

In a 6-3 ruling, the court said the ESA provides "comprehensive protection for endangered and threatened species" and regulations protecting habitat are reasonable. The Interior secretary has "reasonably construed the intent of Congress when he defined 'harm' to include 'significant habitat modification or degradation that actually kills or injures wildlife,'" the justices said.

The decision in the Sweet Home endangered species case prompted an immediate call for ESA reform.

"Since the court ruled the law will dictate whether habitat modification is allowed on private land, the law must be changed," said Dean Kleckner, American Farm Bureau Federation president. "As the law stands, you can face prosecution for the lawful use of your property if that use unintentionally modifies the habitat of an endangered species that may not actually occupy that land. That clearly is not acceptable.

"The Supreme Court decision is a devastating setback for landowners and their constitutional property rights," Kleckner said. "The 6-3 ruling will likely galvanize the call for commonsense reform of the Endangered Species Act. As the justices indicated, the ruling was based on the belief that habitat protection on private land should be addressed in the usual course of the law. The problem is the current law extracts far too heavy a toll on those people unlucky enough to own endangered species habitat.

"This ruling gives us added impetus to change the Endangered Species Act itself and the flawed regulations that are based on the law," he added. "The act's days of ineffective species protection through negative regulations are numbered. We will work with members of Congress to reform the law into one that allows landowners a positive role in species recovery efforts.

"Through voluntary incentives, proper recognition of constitutionally guaranteed property rights and a good measure of common-sense reform, the management of endangered species habitat on private land will be transformed into a source of pride, rather than a source of fear and concern."

Now Is The Time

To Keep Swine Cool

Hot weather reduces swine performance more than cold weather, resulting in significant economic loss to the pork producer.

While producers have little control over current depressed hog prices or certain disease outbreaks, steps may be taken to keep hogs cool and comfortable.

Larger pigs and hogs begin to feel the effects of heat stress at about 70 degrees F. If temperatures remain above 85 degrees F for more than a short time, substantial losses in performance and in reproductive efficiency may result unless some type of cooling relief is provided.

Evaporative cooling from the body surface is very effective if some type of artificial wetting of the pigs is provided along with adequate air movement over the animals.

To Deworm Pastured Heifers

Heifers that are plagued with parasites are unthrifty and less profitable. When young heifers are pastured, the risk of them acquiring internal parasites is great, especially if the pastures were grazed by heifers the previous year.

To protect these heifers from internal parasites, deworm them about three weeks after initial grazing. Equally important is deworming them a second time, about three to five weeks after the first deworming, depending on label instructions.

Select a product that is effective against adult worms. If you have any questions on deworming and effective products, consult your veterinarian.

To Be A Business Person

The times are changing in American agriculture. Federal programs are being eliminated, reduced, or changed.

Allied businesses are reducing staff and expanding territories of remaining people. Free services are now requiring fees. This means farmers must mature as business people.

In a recent article by Penn State agricultural economist Gregory Hansen on improving communications with farmers and lenders, he details areas farmers must improve their business skills.

These are:

1. Good farm records are needed to provide accurate and reliable information about the status of farm production and costs. In the future, farmers will be increasingly required by lenders to have up to date records that can flag developing problems early on.

2. Farmer-prepared financial statements that are comprehensive will become a standard feature. Bankers can no longer afford to take time to develop farm financial statements when they must service 50 to 100 or more accounts. The farmer is the expert on the farm's position and can best prepare a projected cash flow or balance sheet.

3. A quarterly visit or call to your lender instills confidence with both parties.

Farming is becoming a bigger business every year. As your business grows, so must your business skills.

Now is the time to start improving your financial, legal, and other business skills along with your production skills. Remember, it is your business you are trying to keep profitable!

HOSEA: PATSY OR HERO?
July 16, 1995

HOSEA: PATSY OR HERO?
July 16, 1995

Background Scripture:
Hosea 1:1 through 3:5
Devotional Reading:
Romans 5:1-11

I've heard it said that Hosea was a weak man, because he took back his wife Gomer after she had so shamelessly betrayed him. In the eyes of his compatriots and no less the eyes of our own society today, he sacrificed his honor for the sake of love. He went beyond love's reasonable limits. But I believe Hosea must have been one of the strongest men who ever lived. He had the courage to demonstrate in his own life that love has the power to redeem even the worst of us. Hosea proved that love has no "reasonable limits." And what others may have preached, Hosea demonstrated with his own life, the most powerful of all preaching.

Notice, nowhere in this passage do we learn of Hosea's feelings for Gomer. We don't know what he felt for her — before he married her, nor afterward. Apart from her harlotry, we don't know anything about her. Was she an accomplished homemaker? A good mother? An attractive wife? All the book does suggest is that, despite what she had been, there was something worth saving in her. God told Hosea to take her back, not because she deserved it — she didn't — but despite the fact that she didn't.

LOVE UNDESERVED

This concept of love which Hosea demonstrated, not argued, shows that true love is not given on the basis of demonstrated worth. As a child of God, Gomer was worth something, even though her life so far had obscured that worth. Hosea drew this analogy from God's love of the people of Israel. God loved Israel, not because they had demonstrated their woth, but despite the fact that their lives kept hidden the image of God within them. On the basis of what they had done, they were not lovable. On the basis of what God knew they could be, he loved them.

Something else Hosea demonstrates about love: it persists, even when there seems to be no reason to do so. In I Cor. 13 Paul said, "Love bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things" (13:7). Hosea's life is proof of that. It appears that even after Hosea redeemed Gomer from a life of prostitution, even after she had borne him three children, she left him to resume her degrading life. Shouldn't that have been the final blow to Hosea's love? No, no more than it was the final blow for God's love of his people.

ENDLESS LOVE

Gomer somehow had become a slave and Hosea buys her back. That's how persistent love is! That's why Paul says, "Love never ends" (13:8). Everything else ends, but not love. Like God, it never gives up. It continues to woo and pursue us, no matter what we have done and been.

That doesn't mean that Hosea felt loving toward Gomer. The book with his name on it tells us nothing of his feelings. It tells us rather of his actions. Gomer may not appear very lovable, but Hosea rises above his feelings and does the right and redeeming thing.

I wish we knew what happened to Gomer after Hosea's heroic act of love, I wish we could say that she changed and became a perfect spouse. But Hosea doesn't tell us. He did not love Gomer because he was assured that she would respond accordingly and become worthy of his love. Nor do our efforts to do the loving thing carry with them the promise that, if we do, everything will work out all right. Love's only promise is that, if we love, we will be doing precisely what God does with and for us. Loving is its only reward, for it above all else links us to God and his love.

WaterGate.™ 3" Irrigation Pipe 30' Length

ECONOMICAL First Cost is Less Expensive!

- Chemical Resistant — won't corrode with agricultural chemicals, corrosive waters or hot soils.
- Formulated Compound — resistant to impact and sun's ultraviolet rays.
- Non-conductor or electricity — eliminates electrolysis, easy to handle, safer!
- Comparable in weight — interchangeable with coupled aluminum tubing and fittings.
- Flexible — doesn't dent, male end doesn't egg shape.
- Threaded outlet — 1" pipe thread.

Over the years we have found this pipe to be more durable than aluminum pipe. Aluminum prices went up 15-20% since last year and WaterGate Pipe has come down in price. Interchanges with standard hook & latch irrigation pipe, over 30,000 ft in stock ready for delivery.
FREE Delivery on 1,500 ft or more.

OK City Feeder Cattle

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK
JULY 12, 1995

Compared to two weeks ago: Feeder steers and heifers firm to 1.00 higher. Demand good for all grades and classes. Calves uneven with light weight calves weak and calves heavy enough to go north firm. Calf demand good from combelt interests, fair to moderate from local stocker operators. Weigh conditions again average to full as cattle drank heavily with temperature over 100 degrees. Flesh condition is typical for summer months which is medium to slightly thin on feeders; calf flesh soft to slightly thin. Quality remains average to many plain, small end attractive. Slaughter cows and bulls 1.00-2.00 lower. Demand moderate with several buyers out of market. 580 cows and bulls sold with 70 percent to packers.

Receipts this week 13,200; last week 505; last year 12,870. Supply consisted of 75 percent yearlings and some calves over 600 lbs; 21 percent calves under 600 lbs; 4 percent cows and bulls.

Getting the records straight for the Future . . . .

With PA DHIA

Becky & Kelby Painter

"There seems to be a good communication network within the organization. This facilitates problem solving. Any time we've needed special attention – whether it's to answer a question or to customize a report – we get immediate results.

We make full use of the Heifer Management records, utilizing the heifer book and reports that are formatted for our own operation.

Probably the best part of our PA DHIA package is our Technician. She's constantly working with us to help us make improvements wherever we need. She's dependable, reliable, honest, tactful, discreet, energetic, insightful and just plain helpful. She's important to us!!"

NAJ Seeks Multiple Component Pricing In Farm Bill

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio—"We seek nothing less than national implementation of multiple component pricing by the year 2000," said Ted Luther, president at the 1995 Annual Meeting of National All-Jersey Inc. held July 1, in Albany, N.Y.

President Luther explained to members that multiple component pricing (MCP) has impacted all Jersey breeders, whether they receive direct MCP payments or not by increasing the value of all Jersey cows.

To accomplish the goal of 100 percent MCP, NAJ is concentrating on promoting a MCP provision in the 1995 Farm Bill currently being drafted by Congress.

According to Michael Brown, general manager of NAJ, there is broad industry support for MCP in this farm bill from both the processor and producer side of the industry. NAJ is working to ensure the views of these groups are part of the final bill.

In his CEO report, Calvin Covington reported, "During the year, USDA recommended multiple component pricing for six federal orders. The Upper Midwest—the traditional dairy heartland—is included in these orders. Final decisions are expected from USDA at any moment. When issued, almost 54 percent of all producer milk regulated by federal orders will be priced under some type of multiple component pricing."

In other business, NAJ President Ted Luther was reelected and Dan Bansen, Dayton, Ore. was reappointed and named vice president. William Mason, Buhl, Idaho was reelected for a four-year term.

Ohio Heifer Takes Supreme Honors At Somerset Jackpot Show

Amanda Darr, 13, right, won the Somerset County champion exhibitor title, and her steer was named the club calf sale champion at the Somerset County Beef Jackpot Show, from Mark and Loretta Davis, Burbank, Ohio, who are flanking judge Jim Dill, Murfreesboro, Tenn.

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.)—The summer day was made to order for Andy Campbell of Eaton, Ohio, on July 9 when his heifer was named supreme champion at the Somerset County Jackpot Show.

Julie DeChristofaro, 13, of Niles, Ohio had the grand champion steer which she showed in class six and which won the Division II champion title.

Judge Jim Dill from Murfreesboro, Tenn. liked the steer's body configuration and said it was a firm handling steer. He praised the steer's overall look.

The reserve grand champion steer belonged to Carl Detwiler from Roaring Spring, Blair County, and won the Division III championship.

"He's the most complete in the class," Dill said, "A very deep made steer."

He said he found more likenesses in the steers shown in Division III than in the other divisions.

Amanda Darr of Boswell won the county exhibitor title as well as the Somerset County Club Calf Sale champion.

The animal was second in class eight, the middle steer of a trio of top three class winners that Dill called "mighty powerful." It was purchased from Mark and Loretta Davis of Burbank, Ohio.

Darr is 13. She's the only child of Shelley and Metta Darr of Boswell.

Sara Campbell, Sycamore, had the reserve grand champion heifer in the show. Jason Knotts had the Somerset County champion heifer. Knotts is from Hyndman.

Brad Fisher placed second as county exhibitor and Nicole Fairman's steer was second high Club Calf Sale steer.

In all, 100 animals were shown, 86 of them steers and 14 heifers.

Dill said he was impressed with the show and saw powerhouse steers in the class champions. "The quality was deep and close," he said.

"I was hired for my opinion today and I looked for what I would want in my own herd," he told the audience.

Participants this year came from Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia. Spokesman Sam Armstrong said the show was bigger than last year.

The event was sponsored by the Somerset County Beef Producers and Pennsylvania Cattleman's Association.

Following is a partial list of winners: Steers—Class 1: 1. David Cambruzzi; 2. Jon Guindon; 3. Patrick Ford. Class 2: 1. Shawna Cambruzzi; 2. J.W. Buttermore; 3. Michelle Guindon. Class 3: 1. Pa.DHIA Recognizes Technician Achievements

DAVID BIGELOW
Training Coordinator

UNIVERSITY PARK (State College) — A number of technicians with the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association (Pa.DHIA) were recently honored by the association for their achievements, during an awards breakfast held in conjunction with the technicians' summer conference at the Holiday Inn in Indiana.

One of the most coveted awards Pa.DHIA presents is the Herb Gilmore Superior Technician Award. Raymond Ross, of Montour County, received the award.

The award was started this year to honor Herb Gilmore, who worked as an extension dairy specialist at Pa.DHIA from 1946 to 1980.

In his position, Gilmore worked closely with county agents to increase the accuracy and reliability of records, train technicians, enforce rules and regulations, use records to build educational programs, increase numbers of cows and herds on test, build leadership, and strengthen boards of directors.

The purpose of the award is to honor those technicians who deliver exceptional service to Pennsylvania's dairy farmers, promote good public relations and provide up-to-date records for all their members.

The recipient must be a full-time employee with a minimum of 20 years service, have previously received the association's Distinguished Service Award, and also qualified during the current year for the Award of Merit.

Dean Amick, Pa.DHIA director of operations, and Herb Gilmore, who attended the awards breakfast, both presented Ross with a plaque and a $100 cash award.

Also of special significance was the recognition of Gerald Miller, of Chester County, for his 52 years of service. For his long and dependable service, Amick presented a gold watch to Miller.

Based on five-year increments of service, others were also recognized for years in service.

Pa.DHIA Recognizes Technician Achievements

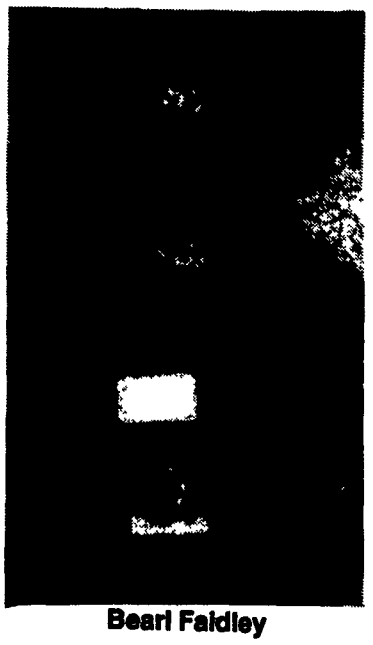
The Putnam Memorial Award was presented to one full-time technician and two part-time technicians.

Cindy Davis, of Erie County, was the full-time employee who received the honor, while Barbara Gary of Bradford County, and Ted Farabaugh, of Cambria County were the part-time employee recipients.

The Putnam award is an annual recognition given to those who commit the fewest errors per 1,000 cows tested. Technicians may win this award only once. Each winner received an engraved desk set.

The award, started in 1983, was named in honor of Dexter N. Putnam, an extension dairy agent from 1957 to 1982 when he retired. His dairy extension responsibilities included working with DHIA technicians to improve their accuracy in reporting data on DHIA forms.



Bearl Faidley

Shane Henry, of Cumberland County, was the recipient of the Carl B. Hollinger Memorial Award.

Rodney Darr

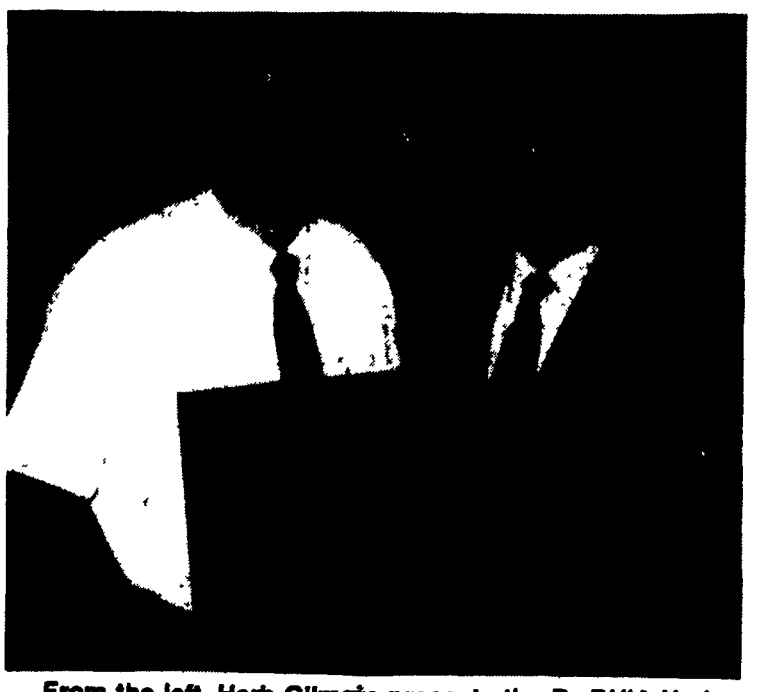
The Hollinger award is presented to the technician who, in the opinion of those who work in the central milk testing laboratory, has done outstanding work with neatness in sample packing, size of samples, method of ordering supplies, and cooperation with the lab.

Henry received an engraved desk set.

Annually, the Pa.DHIA also recognizes a technician from each of its four regions with a Distinguished Service Award.

Recipients were Susan Tallman, of Erie County, in Region 1; Bearl Faidley, of Somerset County, in Region 2; Brenda Ford, of Bradford County, for Region 3; and Carol Spatz, of Berks County, for Region 4.

Each candidate for the award must have completed five years of service and qualified for the Award of Merit for the previous year.



From the left, Herb Gilmore presents the Pa.DHIA Herb Gilmore Superior Technician Award to Raymond Ross, Montour County technician.

The criteria for selection include cooperation with county personnel, dairymen, DHIA personnel, stastistical performance and neatness and appearance.

The award can only be won once, and the winning this award is a prerequisite for consideration for the Herb Gilmore Superior Technician Award.

In other awards, Jane Kashner received a clock plaque with her Pa.DHIA Retirement Award recognizing 18 years service in the Crawford County area.

There were 51 technicians who qualified for the Award of Merit, an award recognizing length of service, workload, and score well on a technician worksheet performance evaluation.

Each recipient received $25, with $5 added for each consecutive year the award is received.

Also recognized were the winners of the Rookie of the Year awards. This award also makes a distinction between full-time and part-time employees.

Each received an engraved plaque.

Rodney Darr, of Somerset County, was the recipient of the full-time employee Rookie of the Year Award.

Cindy Garner of Huntingdon County and Mae Kahler of Schuylkill County each received part-time Rookie of the Year awards.

In order to qualify for the award, new technicians must who exceptional aptitude in learning the job of a Pa.DHIA technician, have worked at least six months and not more than 18, and have demonstrated outstanding cooperation with the state and local DHIA organizations in conducting an efficient and accurate testing program.

The staff at Pa.DHIA would like to take the opportunity to congratulate the award winners on a job well done.

From the left, David Slusser, Pa.DHIA general manager presents a retirement plaque to Jane Kashner, Crawford County technician.

Vanishing Acres: Surrounded By Development, Farmers Face Tough Decisions

extension agent, recalled the day with a shrug. "It caused some problems," he said, trying to be nonchalant. Then he got serious. "But that was probably the biggest problem that we ever had."

While inspecting his fields recently, Lehigh County dairyman John Valkovec reached down to pull up some newly seeded alfalfa. Instead of merely making hay, he had to stop and remove all sorts of trash in his field that could wreak havoc with his equipment.

Valkovec said one day he was mowing five acres of alfalfa near a development. Some residents decided to use the field as a driving range. The dairyman had to stop several times to remove golf balls — in all, he picked 100 balls from the field.

But the golf balls haven't been nearly as frustrating as the empty beer cans.

"When you're chopping silage, before you see the cans, they're on the load and you have to throw the load away," said Valkovec.

On a hot day in early July this year, Jacob Stahl, a Lancaster County poultryman, was using a sicklebar mower to remove some heavy brush in a detention basin near some newly constructed houses. At the edge of the basin, the farmer worried about how close he could cut to electrical and telephone cabling that provides service to residents of a new development.

In addition, property markers — lengths of wood of all sizes — poked up here and there, almost with abandon. In the same field, Stahl had found some discarded one-inch thick cabling that could have heavily damaged his equipment. He mowed around it. But the grass was unbelievably, dangerously thick. The mowing was slow going, until the the big heavy bar unhooked after striking a rock, and stopped.

Forrest Wessner, a Lehigh County cash crop and potato farmer, remembers plowing a field one spring. A neighbor came up to him and asked him to turn down the tractor's radio, because it was, according to the neighbor, "making too much noise."

Joe Stahl, son of Lancaster County poultry farmer Jacob Stahl, said he was working on the farm one day when a neighbor asked him about some fencing on the farm property. The neighbor wanted to put in a split rail fence at the corner of the lot. The neighbor, who was landscaping a newly purchased home, asked Joe if the fence on the farm property was going to be replaced.

Joe said the neighbor suggested to him that a split rail fence would look a whole lot nicer than the farmer's "rusting fence back there, and it would help my property."

While residents in the surrounding development were celebrating with food and fireworks on a July 4 evening, Tim Fritz was getting concerned and irritated. Residents were shooting fireworks into a herd of young Holstein cows and heifers on some pastureland that was hemmed in by new houses. "It caused some problems," he said, trying to be nonchalant. Then he got serious. "But that was probably the biggest problem that we ever had."

Some residents decided to use the field as a driving range. The dairyman had to stop several times to remove golf balls — in all, he picked 100 balls from the field.

Stories of how farmers deal with neighbors — from farmers complaining about trespassing snowmobile riders and four-wheel vehicle operators to housing residents who sue farmers because of the noise of corn driers or tractors — abound in the heavily populated counties of southeastern Pennsylvania.

The farmers complain because the residents don't understand farming. They've never experienced life on a farm. They don't understand agriculture.

Residents see flies invading backyard summer holiday barbeques and want to tell the farmer what they think about that freshly spread manure.

"We get a lot of calls from the public," said Leon Ressler, Lancaster County ag environment agent who deals with farm/urban interface issues.

Most commonly, in the summer, the complaints against farmers mount. Sometimes it's the odor from freshly spread manure. Often it is the farmer, intent on getting the cropwork finished, working the fields too late. Many times it can be the noises generated by the sound of tractor engines, grain driers, feed mixers, and whatnot.

But the most common problem is the flies — especially when manure is applied near a development. If the manure is not worked into the soil, the fly larvae hatch, and the cycle can continue on. Even though the common housefly has only a 10-12 day lifecycle, succeeding generations can sprout and overtake a field.

And fly in through open windows in new houses.

There are no simple strategies, according to Ressler. Even Joe Stahl admits that the fly issue is the "greatest challenge" for farmers. Stahl admits that, when it comes to good neighbor relations, the fly problem is "our worst enemy."

Early incorporation of the manure by moldboard plowing can go a long way to stopping fly problems, according to Ressler. Other problems demand more communication between the farmer and the neighbors.

"I try to encourage the neighbor to find out who the farmer is and talk to him to discuss the problem," said Ressler. "I also give them some suggestions on what they can do to reduce the problems over the short-term."

But even with precautions and sound management strategies, the challenge for farmers in dealing with neighbors in new residential housing goes on.

A neighbor came up to him and asked him to turn down the tractor's radio, because it was, according to the neighbor, 'making too much noise.'

For John Valkovec and family, the urban challenge is from cities such as Philadelphia and from those who make the daily commute from New Jersey.

For Fred Seipt, co-owner of Freddy-Hill Farms in Landsdale, the residents who surround his property come from nearby Allentown and Philadelphia. His property is conveniently located for residents who want to commute from the big-city jobs and high-paying businesses in the northern and western suburbs of Philadelphia. Seipt has difficulty moving his equipment during the day because of the high amount of residential traffic.

Freddy-Hills Farms is within 35 minutes of Philadelphia's International Airport, within easy access of the Blue Route and the state turnpike. However, Seipt has learned to live with and profit from the amount of residents by constructing an entertainment complex on his farm, which includes two miniature golf courses and batting cages. (More about Seipt later on in the series.)

Joe Stahl admits that the fly issue is the 'greatest challenge' for farmers.

In 1956, Jacob Stahl and family moved to the farm once owned by Ira Landis, Stahl's father-in-law. Stahl said that prior to the Landis Homes Retirement Community development which borders his farm, there was concern the retirement community was "too far out in the country," said Jacob. A relative told him, "the farm is too far way, there is no bus service, people won't want to come out here. Now look where we're at — we're right against the development."

Within the past six years, two large developments have taken up most of the space on the farm's western edge. On the eastern edge of the farm, the Landis Homes Retirement Community was built up. There are housing developments on the western edge of the Stahl farm.

For Tim Fritz, "easy access" has defined the hundreds of houses that have sprouted up in the developments just off Lincoln Highway. It is this "easy access" to several department stores, including a Wal-Mart now under construction about a mile from the farm, that has appealed to the homeowners. A plethora of fast food restaurants, convenience stores, car dealerships, and entertainment complexes are within a half mile of the farm.

Leon Ressler, Lancaster County ag environment agent, considers the Fritz farm a 'classic example of urban pressure against the farm.
'It doesn't get any worse than that.'

But the close proximity of houses, some within only 100 feet of manure windrows, creates special challenges for Fritz.

Leon Ressler, Lancaster County ag environment agent, considers the Fritz farm a "classic example of urban pressure against the farm.

"It doesn't get any worse than that," said Ressler. "But there are plenty more farmers that have to deal with development right next to their fields."

Leon Ressler, ag environmental agent, considers the Fritz farm, pictured here, a "classic example of urban pressure against the farm." Notice how close new housing is, on left, to farm buildings. "It doesn't get any worse than that," said Ressler.

Editor's Note: In part two of the series, Lancaster Farming examines steadily growing urban/rural problems. Also, what are the special challenges — and fascinating ways farmers have learned to adapt — to living close to development?

For Fred Seipt, co-owner of Freddy-Hill Farms in Landsdale, the residents who surround his property come from nearby Allentown and Philadelphia. His property is conveniently located for residents who want to commute from the big-city jobs and high-paying businesses in the northern and western suburbs of Philadelphia.

Md. Agriculture Fairs Attract Millions

ANNAPOLIS, Md.—Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Lewis R. Riley has announced that during 1994, more than 2.1 million people attended Maryland's county fairs, the Maryland State Fair, community shows, and a wide variety of animal agricultural shows.

"We are now coming into our heavy fair and show season for 1995. Once again, we can expect more than two million people to come to these events and learn about agriculture while they are having fun. The recent Delmarva Chicken Festival in Federalsburg, Md., was extremely successful, and I expect the county fairs held across the state will continue to be extremely popular. All of these events are tremendous opportunities for our state's agricultural industry to meet and talk to its customers," Riley said.

During 1994, some 58,000 exhibitors participated in these fairs with more than 155,000 exhibits. The Maryland Agricultural Fair Board, working through the Maryland Department of Agriculture, supports these shows and each year produces a comprehensive fair and show schedule. The 1995 Fair and Show Schedule may be obtained from the Maryland Department of Agriculture, Marketing Services, 50 Harry S. Truman Parkway, Annapolis, MD 21401., (410) 841-5770.

Milk Haulers Exempt From 80,000 Lb. Limit

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania milk haulers are now exempt from the 80,000-pound weight limit, and can enjoy a new cap of 95,000 pounds, consistent with surrounding New York state, thanks to legislation signed into law this week by Gov. Tom Ridge.

"Passage of this measure was made possible through a combined effort of dairy industry leaders and legislators," said Charles Brosius, state secretary of agriculture.

"The exemption will translate into increased profits for Pennsylvania's dairy farmers by allowing them to be competitive with New York state which already has a 95,000-pound weight limit for trucks.

"It impacts every cooperative, milk hauler and dairy farmer in the commonwealth."

The new law allows milk haulers to carry 60,000 pounds of milk, plus the 35,000 pound weight of the truck, which means haulers really are to enjoy a 45,000-pound increase.

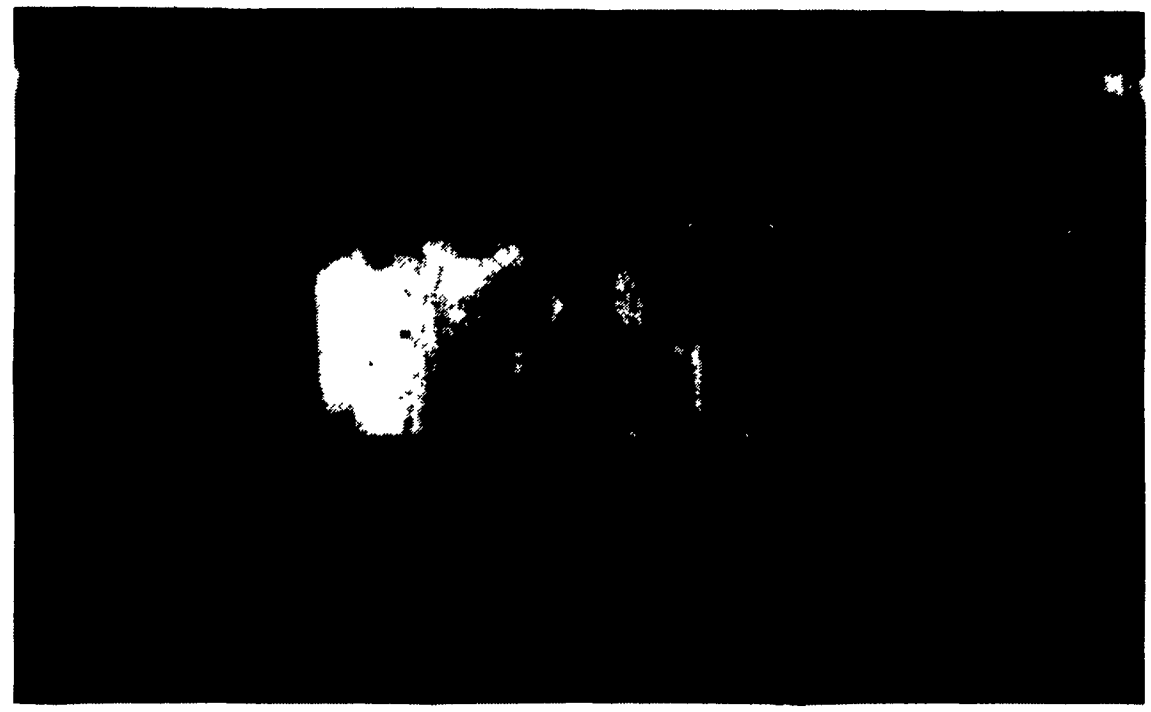
Milk being hauled from Pennsylvania farms to New York City costs as much as 12.5 cents per hundredweight more than milk shipped within New York State.

Similarly, loads of New York milk shipped to Pennsylvania plants must be downsized, significantly increasing hauling costs.

Representatives of the state Department of Agriculture, Dairylea Cooperative Inc., Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, the Pennsylvania Motor Truck Association and the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation were instrumental in securing passage of the law.

Secretary Brosius also recognized the help of House Transportation Committee Chairman Rick Geist (R-Blair County) and Senate Transportation Chairman Doyle Corman (R-Centre County), as well as state Rep. John Barley (R-Lancaster County) and Sen. Roger Madigan (R-Bradford County) for providing leadership in the passage of the legislation.

The secretary said, "Gov. Ridge and I are both committed to increasing the profitability of all Pennsylvania farmers, and the passage of this legislation represents a savings to dairy farmers, cooperatives and haulers."



From the left, at the table, Sen. Barry Stout sits with Gov. Tom Ridge at the signing of law to increase the weight allowance for Pennsylvania milk haulers. Supporters of the measure, from the left standing are, Bob Junk, Pennsylvania Farmers Union; Rep. Raymond Bunt; Phyllis Brown with the House Transportation Committee; Rep. Richard Geist; Diane Salerno, with the Pa. Motor Trucks Association; Cheryl Hicks, staff aide to Sen. Stout; Brenda Shambaugh, Pa. State Grange; Agriculture Secretary Charles Brosius; John Nikoloff, with Capital Associates; Gwen Bower, PDA; and Eric Coolidge, June Diebold, and Raymond Diebold with Dairylea Co-op Inc.

Scrapie Disease Is Serious

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — There have been some carefull, if not hesitant, public reports about the cause of Scrapie Disease in sheep and similar diseases in other mammals.

That's because, exactly what causes these diseases is not known.

Most published reports refer to it as an agent, and though some differing theories abound, what seems the most logical so far is that the agent is an especially small virus-like pathogen that cloaks itself in protein from the brain.

The immune system of the host animal apparently doesn't recognize the agent as foreign because no antibodies are produced, which would seem to support the theory that the agent assimilates proteins from the host.

According to a scientific paper authored by R.H. Kimberlin, it is possible that the disease is caused by a virus-like agent, although Kimberlin said it is probably smaller than any known virus.

In the paper, Kimberlin wrote that the pathogen that causes Scrapie disease in sheep is quick to mutate and that there is apparently a "family" of the disease.

The exact method of how it is transmitted isn't exactly known, but there seems to be strong evidence that it is transmitted mostly from the mother to the young through placental fluids, and into flock-members and other animals through the consumption of infected tissue such as placental materials and brain tissue.

The disease causes a "spongiform encephalopathy" — it literally creates small holes throughout the brain so that the brain, microscopically, resembles a sponge.

It is fatal. There is no cure. There is yet no test nor indication that the disease has been contracted until symptoms occur.

From the time the disease is contracted, it can take up to 60 months for symptoms to occur. Some sheep, apparently due to a natural genetic difference, may serve as carriers and never exhibit the disease. But it is not a genetic disease, such as BLAD in cattle.

With Scrapies, animals exhibiting symptoms may live from one week to six months.

Those who still practice eating sheep brains would probably be well advised to stop, although there is currently no direct evidence that humans are susceptible to the Scrapie strain of the disease.

There are known human variations of the disease.

And, it has also been shown, for example, that the form of the agent associated with Scrapie Disease is able to cross over to other species. Thus, some associate an unnecessary risk in consuming sheep brains.

For some time, sheep carcasses have been used for rendering into protein feeds for livestock, farm minks, and pets.

It is believed, but not absolutely known, that bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) was caused by feeding rendered sheep carcasses to cattle.

BSE is also known as Mad Cow Disease, because of the neurological destruction and the behavior that's symptomatic of the disease.

According to a January 1995 factsheet from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS), on BSE, "There are different scientific hypotheses concerning the origins of BSE.

"One theory is that BSE had existed in undetectable levels in the British cattle population prior to 1986.

"Another theory stems from epidemiological data that suggest that BSE in England may have been caused by feeding cattle rendered protein produced from the carcasses of scrapie-infected sheep.

"The practice of using products such as meat and bonemeal in cattle rations as a source of protein has been common for several decades. ... Changes in rendering operations in the early 1980s (in Britian) — particularly the removal of a solvent-extraction process and the elimination of a second steam-heat treatment — may have played a part in the appearance of the disease and the large number of cases that developed."

In cattle, according to the APHIS, "There is no evidence that BSE spreads from unrelated cattle to cattle, or from cattle to other species by contact. Moreover, researchers have not gathered sufficient ... evidence or experimental data to determine if maternal transmission of BSE occurs."

However, "In an experimental study of the disease's biological route of development in cattle, traces of the BSE agent were detected in the small intestines of calves that had been fed large doses of material from BSE-infected animals."

A spongiform encephalopathy disease is also known within the mink industry, but only after mink were fed sheep protein and bone meal. It has been found in captive deer and elk in the West, where the disease is called, "Chronic Wasting Disease."

It has also been discovered in cats.

In humans, the diseases called "kuru," "Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease," and "Gerstmann-Straussler syndrome" have been known for some time.

Kuru is a fatal disease found among a group of primitive people in New Guinea.

According to reports, it is believed that kuru was kept within the tribes because of a practice they had of consuming the brains of their elders. Apparently, this was thought to be a way of transmitting knowledge from the older generation to the younger generation.

According to Dr. Tom Drake, a mammalian diagnostician at the Penn State Diagnostic Laboratory in State College, the apparent common factor of the disease being transmitted is consumption of infected tissue.

Drake is also a member of the Scrapie Committee that oversees the state's voluntary Scrapie-Free certification program.

According to Drake, Scrapie Disease is not rare in Pennsylvania, though it is probably more common in some other states.

"There are sporadic cases in sheep all the time," Drake said this week. "It is not a rare disease. I think it's on the rise."

The disease has been observed in sheep in Britian and parts of Europe since the 18th century, according to Kimberlin. Further, introductions of sheep to other parts of the world has resulted in the disease being observed in almost every area except in Australia and New Zealand, where strict controls over introduced sheep have prevented the disease from taking hold.

Further, according to Kimberlin, research on sheep and Scrapie Disease suggests that the disease is such that individual animals apparently are affected according to a genetic susceptibility. Some animals may be carriers and not express the disease.

Eradication efforts in United States have mostly failed because of cost and lack of cooperation.

Nationwide, since 1992, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has been attempting to get sheep producers to voluntarily participate in a Scrapie Disease containment and eradication program, but success has been limited.

The program is designed so that sheep producers may elect to work toward certifying their flock Scrapie-free.

States are independent in adopting such a certification program and Pennsylvania has opted to carry it out. However, sheep producers apparently have not been quick to sign up.

In Pennsylvania, less than a dozen sheep producers are currently participating, even though the size of the flock is not a factor in participation.

The program is designed so that a producer desiring Scrapie-free certification is to identify all animals and keep records. If after five years there is no evidence of Scrapie disease being exhibited in the flock, that flock can be certified Scrapie-free.

(Electronic identification in the ear is encouraged, though tatooes are allowable, but more time consuming.)

Also, in order to participate, the owner of the flock must agree to report suspected Scrapie animals immediately and not sell them for slaughter or breeding stock.

If after gaining certification or being in the program for several years, a flock owner finds that one of his animals shows up with Scrapies, then tissue samples from every dead animal from the flock (over 18 months) must be submitted for testing.

There is perhaps one drawback to the program for the producer who gains certification — in order to keep certification, that producer may not introduce into or expose his flock to an animal coming from a flock that has not achieved such status.

The benefit for achieving such status is that the offspring can be sold as certified Scrapie-free and can be sold to anyone.

In the recent past, some producers have suggested that the stigma that may come from participating in such a program could hurt their business, especially if they are selling breeding stock and testing of dead animals reveals Scrapie Disease.

Further, the state's sheep production business has been marginally profitable in recent years, mostly from pressure from wool imports and limited demand for meat.

However, others have said that when more people learn of the possible ramifications of allowing Scrapie Disease to continue to be spread through breeding stock, those with certified Scrapie Disease-free status should enjoy greater demand for their offspring and breeding stock.

Because of the state's developing tripartite animal diagnostic system, Pennsylvania sheep producers have a good opportunity to gain certification for their own economic benefit and help rid everyone of the possibility of having this agent become more of a problem.

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio—Sunny Day Berretta Alma, a 7-month-old daughter of Mason Boomer Sooner Berretta, topped the 1995 National Heifer Sale, bringing $7,500.

The top seller was consigned by Herby D. Lutz, Chester, S.C. and will make her new home with New Direction Jerseys, Elizabethtown, Pa.

The 1995 National Heifer Sale averaged $2,807.81 on 64 head. The sale was held July 1, in Albany, N.Y. in conjunction with the annual meetings of the American Jersey Cattle Association and National All-Jersey, Inc.

Nico DeBoer, Chandler, Texas was the volume buyer purchasing five head for a total of $11,700.

Eight percent of the gross sale price from animals sold in the National Heifer Sale is used to fund the Jersey Youth Programs. Co-chairmen of the event were Scott Carson, New Lebanon, N.Y.; Greg Chamberlain, Wyoming, N.Y.; and Brian Chittenden, Schodack Landing, N.Y.

The sale was managed by Jersey Marketing Service, with Merlin Woodruff of Ohio as the auctioneer.

AJCA Posts Strong Year

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio—The annual meeting of the American Jersey Cattle Association was upbeat as Executive Secretary and CEO Calvin Covington announced that 56,165 Jerseys were registered with the AJCA in 1994.

Putting this into perspective, Covington reported, "We registered almost twice as many animals as the other four high-protein breeds combined."

The membership of the American Jersey Cattle Association (AJCA) met June 29-July 1 in Albany, NY for the 127th annual meeting, which was attended by over 500 people.

President Richard Clauss, Hilmar, Calif., praised the "progressive" nature of the AJCA in his address to the membership. Clauss was among the hosts of the recent World Jersey Conference held in California.

Visitors from 20 countries attended the conference. There were 600 people present at the Pride of the West Sale held in Hilmar, in conjunction with the conference.

Clauss told the membership, "While visiting with our foreign guests, I found as did others, that we here in the U.S. really are the leaders of the Jersey breed and others continue to look to us for that leadership."

In other news from the meeting, the financial condition of the Association was reported strong for 1994 with the Association reporting a net income of $15,883. This is a turn around of $85,000 from the loss of $69,332 reported a year ago.

Requirements for Hall of Fame cows was raised to 800 pounds of protein actual production, and for the first time, credit cards will soon be accepted for payment of AJCA products and services.

Five new directors seated during the meeting were James Billman, West Salem, Ohio, Pat Rankin, Faunsdale, Ala., and Wilfred Owens, Frederic, Wis., elected for three-year terms.

Helene Dreisbach, Hamburg, Pa., was elected for a two-year term and Calvin Graber, Parker, S.D., was elected for a one-year term.

Richard Clauss, Hilmar, Ca., was reelected as president and Robert Howard, Tillamook, Ore., was named vice president.

Other directors are Joe Buckler, Lakeland, Fla.; Paul Chittenden, Schodack Landing, N.Y.; David Jones, Yale, Okla.; Brody Koon, Brashear, Texas; Newell Mills, Fallon, Nev.; John Palmer, Cornish, Maine; Michael Riggs, Danville, Ind.; and John Wilk, Raleigh, N.C.

Due to redistricting, there are 14 members on the Board of Directors during the transition.

New Holland Celebrates 100th Anniversary

helping provide more than $200 million in business tax relief, helping with creating an orderly cleanup of old industrial sites, and splitting up DER.

He also lent praise to the legislators who sat on the stage for their favorable votes.

Ridge talked about the New Holland employees as "world class workers making world class products not only competing in the world market, but winning."

He also said the visit had a personnel side in that he met with an old Army buddy.

Acknowledging the 100th anniversary of the town and the state Department of Agriculture, Gov. Ridge said that "1895 was a banner year for New Holland and Pennsylvania."

Comparing the growth of the New Holland business to agriculture in the state, he said that both have "... grown in strength through adaptation and a willingness to use new technology."

He spoke specifically about the plant he toured and said that he was impressed with the attention to detail that workers gave, the "empowering" of employees to make decisions to help improve the business.

He also said that the practical application of technology "makes the existance of the smallest of family farms and the largest of agricultural operations possible."

Ridge said he is working closely with the PDA to find new markets for agriculture and to develop more export markets; to make Pennsylvania more job friendly and to "... peel away the layers of regulation ..." and replace government's role as big brother to partner with business.

The kind of partner the government should be, he said, is "One that doesn't compromise environmental standards, but one that says we will work as a partner to help (business) understand and comply."

He also talked nonspecifically about changing the welfare compensation system, providing quality health care to see people through from job to job, and to help foster a better attitude — an attitude of success.

To a loud applause from the audience, Ridge said, "We don't only want to compete in Pennsylvania, we want to win in Pennsylvania."

In appreciation for his attendance at the 100th anniversary observance, Kennedy presented Ridge with a toy New Holland silage wagon and a combine.

With the Lancaster County political contigent seated behind him, along with Agriculture Secretary Charles Brosius, Gov. Tom Ridge holds high a base holding a toy replica of a New Holland silage wagon and combine presented to him by company president Tom Kennedy.

Clean And Green Sign-Up Meeting In Farmersville

FARMERSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — A Clean and Green educational and sign-up meeting is scheduled here at the Farmersville Fire Hall on Thursday, July 27 at 7 p.m.

Terry Kauffman, county commissioner, will speak about the Clean and Green Law and its benefits to farmers.

Deadline for sign-up for the program is Sept. 1. Kauffman will speak about the appraisal process and how farmers can benefit now by signing up for Clean and Green.

Forms will be available at the meeting.

Issues BVD Advice

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius on Monday advised cattle owners to maintain vaccinations against bovine virus diarrhea (BVD) if they will be exhibiting the animals at shows.

BVD is a highly contagious viral disease that increases mortality in beef and dairy cattle herds.

"All cattle for exhibition should be vaccinated against BVD," Brosius said. "An appropriate vaccination program will minimize risk for all exhibitors."

There are no human health concerns associated with BVD, which is a disease of bovine animals. It presents no threat to most other species.

While BVD has been found in many herds in the United States, a new variant, called Type 2 BVD, began to afflict Pennsylvania cattle herds in 1994.

Symptoms of the disease may include unusual salivation, difficulty breathing, high fever, abortion, diarrhea, and erosions or ulcerations of the mouth and/or coronary band.

BVD vaccination requirements were instituted for cattle shows held at the State Farm Show Complex in 1994. The requirements remain in effect, including entries for the 1995 Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show (PAADS), the 1995 Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) and the 1996 State Farm Show.

The department also issued vaccination recommendations for cattle used in shows throughout the commonwealth.

Department officials have renewed their vaccination recommendations this year. All cattle for exhibition in Pennsylvania must be accompanied by a health certificate, which is signed by a veterinarian, and states that the animal has been immunized against infectious bovine rhinotracheitis (IBR), parainfluenza 3 (PI-3), and BVD using at least two doses of killed vaccine, 2-4 weeks apart, or one dose of modified live virus (MLV) vaccine.

The most recent vaccine must be administered not less than 15 days or more than 180 days before the show.

Owners of vaccinated cattle and exhibit supervisors should note product restrictions because of residues that may result from vaccinations.

Farmers can obtain specific veterinary information from fact sheets available through county Penn State Extension Offices.

GIS Could Reveal A Lot About Your Farm

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MILLERSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Think this is science fiction?

In a year's time, using computer technology, if you're a farm insurance salesman, simply plug a disk into a computer, call up an area in the county, point and click, find all the farm buildings that are at least 500 feet from a stream, tell the computer to print out a mailing list, and market your policy to clients instantly.

In a few years' time, after wondering what that new structure is on a neighboring property, call into county offices by computer, call up the maps, point and click, and find out who owns it, when it was built, and how much it's worth.

If you think it's science fiction, you're wrong. It's all real. In 1996, you could purchase this technology, according to a senior planner with the county planning commission.

A. Jon Hallas, senior planner, administration and information services with the Lancaster County Planning Commission, demonstrated the new technology on Thursday afternoon to 50 individuals associated with conservation resource groups in the state.

Hallas spoke at the annual meeting and technical sesssion of the Keystone Chapter of the Soil and Water Conservation Society at Millersville University.

Using a 486 laptop with Windows, Hallas demonstrated the Geographic Information System (GIS) software, called Arc View 2, developed by Research Inc., in Redlands, Calif. The GIS is a computer system for holding and using information describing places on the earth's surface, said Hallas.

The system, now in the third year in development, uses information provided by "orthophotography." An airplane flies over the entire Lancaster County, taking aerial pictures of land. The pictures are "digitized" and converted to pixels. The software contains 640 tiles of such pictures, each representing an area measuring 5,000 by 9,000 square feet.

In an demonstration using a "mouse" device to point and click, Hallas retrieved information in detailed form, including five-foot contours, buildings, roads, ponds, streams, and other physical characteristics of a group of farms in the Quarryville area. Also, he was able to show parcels, perimeters, and maps. Soon, the database on owners will be complete, and with a simple point and click, the computer user can retrieve ownership and information on any type of land.

Hallas pointed out that this is all public information available at the county courthouse that was converted for use in the computer program.

Regarding some of the privacy issues owning such software could create, Hallas said, "I wouldn't be surprised if people have questions about accessing this data. But it's all public information available at county offices."

The software would be valuable to conservation districts in drawing out plans, for emergency services such as 911 and fire and rescue teams, and planning committees.

Eventually, for a price, information could be "customized" for commerical industry. The "intelligent" system could assemble mailing lists for those who want to market products to select clients.

Soil information could be digitized and also incorporated into the system. Memory size of the information would determine the purchase price, according to Hallas.

The system will be used at the county Natural Resources Conservation Office (NRCS, formerly SCS). John Bert, of the county NRCS, told those attending that the five-foot contour features of the software is valuable for preplanning terraces.

Also at the meeting:

Alan Musselman, of the Lancaster Farmland Trust, told those present that ag preservation has "become the backbone of protection of the countryside from growth and development."

Musselman spoke about the ongoing success of the Trust in its effort to work "one-on-one" with farm families to cultivate a long-term relationship with conservation easement.

The county's private, nonprofit Trust numbers 2,300 members. The county organization has a $240,000 annual operating budget, with an additional land preservation fund to acquire farms and conservation easements.

In under six years, more than 1,110 land trusts have been established around the country, according to Musselman. Also, he provided successful examples of easments throughout the county in a wide variety of situations.

He said the Trust is working to help pass a law, similar to that used in only two states, to make farmland subject to conservation easement exempt from property taxes at the local level. The two states that have such laws are Maine and Maryland.

At the meeting, Wendy Zwally, soil conservationist with the York NRCS, was installed as president of the Keystone Chapter.

Zwally, who will serve all 240 members of the organization representating conservation-minded individuals, plans to have the activities and resources of the organizations branch out into the private sector. Included will be emphasis on natural resource conservation, including recycling, composting, and other issues. According to Zwally, featured will be more emphasis on sustainable agriculture, organic farming, and other issues at the state level.

The association is open not only to conservation district and NRCS personnel but to farmers and agri-industry representatives.

Zwally will represent the state at the national meeting on Aug. 6-9 in Des Moines, Iowa.

At the meeting, Wendy Zwally, soil conservationist with the York NRCS, was installed as president of the Keystone Chapter of the Soil and Water Conservation Society. Zwally will represent the state at the national meeting on Aug. 6-9 in Des Moines, Iowa.

PSU Staff Complete 3rd Edition Dairy Manual

ITHACA, N.Y.—Wouldn't it be nice to have one book containing the most current information necessary to manage a modern dairy farm? Well, it's here!

Faculty and staff of The Pennsylvania State University have put together the third edition of the Dairy Reference Manual, a compendium of information about all facets of dairying—from youngstock to nutrition to housing.

The Dairy Reference Manual, NRAES-63, is designed to allow quick access to facts about such topics as balancing a ration, designing a natural ventilation system for a freestall barn, and identifying the causes of and control measures for mastitis.

The manual will be invaluable to extension agents, consultants, and farm planners for advising producers about a specific problem; veterinarians, engineers, manufacturers, and salespeople who want condensed information; and writers and educators who want to look up key facts—in short, anyone wanting a comprehensive, easy-to-use desk reference about dairy farming.

The 293-page, wire-bound manual contains thirteen chapters: farm management, dairy housing, handling and behavior, youngstock and dairy replacements, dairy nutrition, physiology and disease, reproduction, dairy cattle improvement, milking equipment, milk marketing policy, veal and dairy beef, dairy goats, and the 4-H dairy program.

Much of the information is contained in 240 tables. Eighty-eight illustrations show freestall barn layouts and dimensions; designs for pens, ventilation systems, and handling equipment; and much, much more.

The chapters are supplemented by three appendices: one lists conversion factors, a second gives equations for calculating grain storage capacity, and a third gives advice about how to choose a dairy computer. A list of abbreviations and acronyms and suggested readings for each chapter conclude the book.

The Dairy Reference Manual was compiled by the following faculty and staff members of The Pennsylvania State University: Richard S. Adams, professor emeritus of dairy science; John W. Comerford, associate professor of dairy and animal science; Stephen A. Ford, assistant professor of agricultural economics; Robert E. Graves, professor of agricultural and biological engineering; C. William Heald, professor of dairy science; Arlyn J. Heinrichs, professor of dairy and animal science; William R. Henning, associate professor of animal science; Lawrence J. Hutchinson, professor of veterinary science; Virginia A. Ishler, extension assistant in dairy and animal science; Robin B. Keyser, former assistant professor of agricultural and extension education; Michael L. O'Connor, professor of dairy science; Lawrence W. Specht, professor of dairy science; Stephen B. Spencer, professor of dairy science; Gabriella A. Varga, associate professor of animal science; and Robert D. Yonkers, assistant professor of agricultural economics.

The Dairy Reference Manual, NRAES-63, is available for $40 from NRAES, Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, New York 14853-5701.

Sustainable Agriculture Board Holds First Meeting

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius chaired the first meeting of the Pennsylvania Board of Sustainable Agriculture.

The board will meet quarterly to assist the department in developing a long-range, sustainable plan for Pennsylvania's number one industry.

A sustainable agriculture plan would enable farms to function more efficiently and profitably by making the most use of supplies already on the farm. Farms would then be in a better position to continue operating by supporting themselves over time.

"Gov. Ridge and I want Pennsylvania's farming tradition to continue," Brosius said. "We can do that if we pay attention to our resources and profitability."

Act 129 of 1994 established the Board of Sustainable Agriculture to review and issue grant and loan applications in accordance with guidelines set forth in the Act.

The board is exploring funding sources for a grant and loan program to help farmers develop and use sustainable agriculture practices.

The 16 members of the board and their affiliations include the following: Charles C. Brosius, agriculture secretary, board chairman; Senator Roger Madigan, Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee chairman; Senator Pat Stapleton, Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee minority chairman; Representative Raymond Bunt, House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee chairman; Representative William Lloyd, House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee minority chairman; Mary Ann Keith, agricultural administrator, Mid-State Bank; Dr. Elwin Stewart, Penn State Cooperative Extension Service; Dr. Terry Schettini, Rodale Institute; Preston Boop, PA Association for Sustainable Agriculture; Garry Van De Weert, Bradford County farmer using sustainable agricultural methods; Allen Matthews, Washington County farmer using sustainable agricultural methods; Paul Shaw, Walnut Acres Farms, Snyder County; Dr. Steven Fales, The Pennsylvania State University; Robert Junk, President, Pennsylvania Farmers Union; James Benner, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and Tim Bowser, Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture.

—John Mayer

HORTICOUNTRY

Hi! I'd like to welcome you to HortiCountry, my new monthly column featuring commercial horticulture.

As the new county horticulture agent here in Lancaster, I'm looking forward to meeting many of you at grower meetings in the coming months. I'll use this column to bring you timely information on the production of fruit and vegetable crops.

Tomatoes And Potatoes

There have been no new reports of late blight infection in the county. As the weather warms and dries up, I'm sure many of you will consider stretching your fungicide sprays beyond the recommended intervals.

I can understand your desire to reduce costs, but I do want to remind you of the potential that late blight has to destroy your crops. I have heard reports of fields being destroyed in as little as two weeks under conditions favorable to blight development.

While the weather is hot and dry, the potential for blight development is greatly reduced. But if the weather changes, you could be caught with unprotected fields and rain could keep you from applying fungicides.

Whatever you choose to do, I strongly recommend that you maintain a regular and thorough scouting program.

Weather conditions have been favorable for early blight development on tomatoes. Dr. Alan MacNab from Penn State is reporting that another similar leaf spot is also appearing — Septoria leaf spot. The two diseases are similar because both appear on older foliage.

However, they can be distinguished by their appearance. Early blight spots are usually brownish with concentric dark rings while Septoria spots usually become light in color but may maintain the dark brown margin.

Septoria is prevalent during rainy weather because the spores are spread by splashing rain. Both diseases are controlled by fungicides, but you may be surprised to see a high level of defoliation on early blight-tolerant varieties. This could be due to Septoria leaf spot since early blight tolerant varieties are not resistant to Septoria.

Snap Beans

The EPA has granted a Section 18 approval for the use of Ronilan 50DF in Pennsylvania for the 1995 production season. This will be important to the processing industry in areas where the Botrytis gray mold fungus has developed resistance to other fungicides.

However, there are some very important conditions in this registration, including the stipulation that only a maximum of 3,250 acres of snap beans may be treated in the state during the 1995 growing season.

Grower cooperation will be needed to insure that we do not exceed this limit. Dr. MacNab has taken responsibility for tracking applications, so please contact your county extension office, pesticide representative, or processor field representative to report applications of this material.

General Vegetables

Many vegetable diseases will begin to appear during July and others will show up in August from July infections. If your fields have a history of occurrence of a particular disease, now may be the time to apply the appropriate control measures.

Please consult your copy of the "Commercial Vegetable Production Guide" for a listing of fungicides labeled for use on your crop. Identification information is available in the color publication, "Identifying Vegetable Diseases", which is also available from your extension office.

Fruit

I've noticed a considerable amount of fire-blighted shoots in my travels about the county. These have mostly been on homeowner's trees, but I have seen some in a commercial orchard.

Control measures at this time are rather limited, but the following actions on your part may prevent greater damage from occurring:

1. Remove blighted shoots on small trees before the infection reaches the main trunk. Use a 10 percent bleach solution to disinfect pruning tools. Removal of shoots on larger trees may be difficult due to tree size or number of blighted shoots. Since only the youngest leaves are susceptible to infection, the spread of the disease will be greatly reduced in the future as terminal growth has mostly ceased. Blighted shoots should be removed during next year's dormant pruning.

2. Do not apply streptomycin after bloom except when hail occurs. Then make the application within 24 hours or else it will not be effective. Do not apply streptomycin within 60 days of harvest.

3. Recent studies have shown that green apple aphids do not spread fire blight in the summer. The role of white apple leaf hoppers is uncertain, so in areas where blight is a problem they should be controlled.

Additional information on fire blight and its control can be found in the "1994-1995 Pennsylvania Tree Fruit Production Guide".

...w Fred and Charlie Counted Six

Fred and Charlie have been on a visit to their uncle's farm. They had such a good time there, and are never tired of telling us about the things they did, and the animals they saw—the cows and horses, the sheep and pigs, the ducks and geese and turkeys.

The first morning of their visit they got up very early, because Uncle Jack had promised to take them for a walk round the farmyard and through the fields. As soon as they had had breakfast, they started out. The first thing they saw was Jimmy, looking at them over his stable door Jimmy was the donkey

"I should like a ride on the donkey, Uncle Jack," said Fred.

"Very well, we'll see about that when we get back from our walk." But, of course, Charlie wanted a ride, too So Uncle Jack said they would have to take turns, because there was only one donkey First Charlie could have a ride, and then Fred, because Charlie was younger than Fred.

The boys were so pleased at the thought of the donkey rides they could talk of nothing else all they had gone quite a long way, and come to a field where old Jake was ploughing. "Whatever is old Jake doing, Uncle?" asked Fred.

"He is ploughing," said Uncle Jack, "making the ground ready for sowing the corn The field is too big for a man to dig it all with a spade, so it is done with a plough You can see how the plough turns the soil over, as the horses drag it along. It would be very hard work for one horse, so we put another one with it."

"I know how many horses that makes," said Fred "Charlie doesn't, because he's never been to school, so he can't count."

"Well, you tell him how many horses it makes, and he'll soon learn."

"Why," said Fred, "one horse and one horse make two horses."

"Quite right. And if you have a ride on the black horse, and a ride on the grey horse, as well as a ride on the donkey, how many rides will that be?"

"Three rides," said Fred. "Two rides on the horses and another one on the donkey make three rides altogether."

"That's the way; we shall soon teach Charlie to count."

By this time they had come to the meadows. "I believe Charlie can tell us how many cows there are standing by the gate," said Uncle Jack.

"Oh, yes!" answered Charlie. "There's one lying down, and another one eating the grass. That makes two. And there's another one sitting up and looking at them and another one standing by the gate. That makes four."

But the boys made such a noise that they frightened, and ran away as rabbits run away it is very cause they have such white

Bittersweet Berry Time At Venesky Farm

LORETTA GOLDEN
Cambria Co. Correspondent

LORETTO (Cambria Co.) — Strawberries are one of Mother Nature's sweet summer treats but this summer's crop was "bittersweet" at Venesky Strawberry Farm, Loretto. This year marks the 30th and final season for this berry-picking operation. Owned and operated by brothers, Paul and Joe Venesky, and their wives, Emma and Audrey, the partners are now retiring.

Paul and Emma are the parents of two children, George and Sunny, and also have three grandchildren. Joe and Audrey, who live at the farm, have raised nine children: Tina, Mary Jo, Cindy, Luke, Eric, Lisa, Wade, Judy, and Nancy. The strawberries have helped to finance college educations for three of them. Their clan also includes 14 grandchildren. Through the years, all 11 children of the combined Venesky families, along with numerous friends and relatives, have helped with the strawberry operation in some way or another.

Those who still live in the area along with some of the "local" and "visiting" grandchildren continue to "pitch-in" when needed.

Working with the strawberries required quite a bit of hand labor but both Emma and Audrey agree that their children usually managed to turn it into a "social activity." For instance, the children would do their work and then jump into the pond to cool off.

In 1965, "Venesky Strawberries" began. Why strawberries? According to Joe, he always enjoyed this fruit. His favorite variety of berry is "Raritan" because it is a big producer and good tasting — "just an all around good berry." Joe was also advised that strawberries were a fast cash crop. Berry farming fit into the brothers' work schedules. Paul is a retired mason and Joe retired in 1992 after 34 years in the area coal mines.

Audrey, raised on a nearby small farm, knew that the country was a good place to raise a family. When all of their children were at home she would annually freeze 100 quarts of berries and make countless jars of jelly. Even now when some of the children come home to visit they still raid the cupboard for a jar or two of jelly to take with them. Although Audrey has no particular favorite recipes, the family enjoys strawberry shortcake, pies, biscuits, and chocolate dip strawberries.

Working with the strawberries themselves is very labor intensive. To prepare a new field, it must be fumigated in the spring. This sterilizes the soil. Then, as early as the local climate dictates, the new plants are set out. The blossoms are pulled off the first year and the crop cannot be harvested until the following season. "Daughter" plants or "runners" must be placed in rows along with the main plants. A spray schedule is followed and quite a bit of hand-weeding is necessary. In the fall, the fields are mulched with straw for the winter and then this mulch must be removed in the spring with pitch forks and rakes. There are three "picking" years for the berries and then they are plowed down and placed in rotation with hay.

When the Venesky families first went into the berry business they had "pickers" and the berries were wholesaled to local grocery stores. After a few years, they switched to a "pick-your-own" operation and it has remained that way ever since. They now also sell "by the pound" rather than "by the quart." All seemed to agree that weighing the berries is more fair to the customers.

The typical strawberry season at the Loretto farm ran for approximately three weeks beginning around June 20. This year, due to decreased acreage, berry picking was only done in the morning. In the past, it was done morning and evening. During the years when they were in full production, many workers, easily identified by their red "Venesky Strawberries" caps, were stationed in the fields. At times there were long lines of folks waiting to pick berries and these workers were necessary to help keep "pickers" in the designated areas.

When customers first arrived at the berry patch they had their containers weighed and marked. Next, it was out to the fields where the berries were planted in rows and customers were able to pick from both sides of each row. Children as well as adults have enjoyed picking berries at the farm and church groups and other fund-raising organizations have always been welcomed.

Peak seasons saw 12 acres of strawberries in production. This summer the Veneskys were down to four acres. They had planned to have a few more acres open to the public this year but some of the plants were hard hit by "red steel," a berry disease which attacks their root system.

Berry farmers are just as vulnerable as other farmers to weather conditions, plant diseases, and "critter" damage. The past few weeks have been rainy in this area and so the strawberries ripened and became soft due to all of the moisture. In 1972, the entire berry crop was wiped out with "Hurricane Agnes" after only two days of picking.

When asked about the most important part of the farming operation itself all seemed to agree that it is irrigation. This is crucial to saving a crop and a "must" for growers. Audrey comments that they always hoped for lots of sun because "we can make the rain." The irrigation system is also necessary in the event of a frost. When the frost alarm sounds the irrigation system is turned on to allow the plants to be coated with ice. The water runs until the temperature goes up and then the ice melts naturally. Without irrigation, it is too easy to lose a crop.

Reminiscing a bit, Audrey proudly points out a "memory board" hanging in one of the weighing stations. On this board are many photos taken of the strawberry operation. Each photo has its own story — one picture shows a young priest from India picking berries. This was his very first experience with the fruit! Another photo displays a long line of customers waiting to enter the berry patch — attesting to the popularity and success of the farm.

In speaking of the customers, Joe remarks that most have been very nice to deal with over the years and likens this to the Ivory Soap commercial — "99% good experiiences."

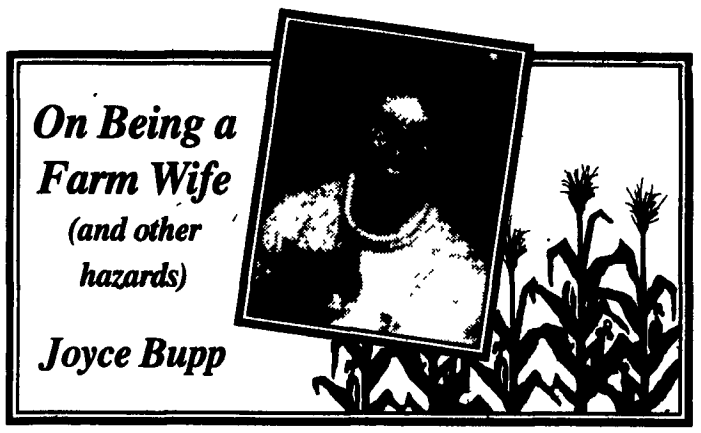
The closing of Venesky Strawberries was anticipated three years ago when no new plants were put out to replace old fields. All partners agree that they will not miss the work involved but will basically miss the people. Over the years many customers have become friends. Joe and Audrey's daughter, Mary Jo, says that her parents are "people people" who thoroughly enjoy dealing with the customers and she feels that they will definitely miss this end of it.

Mary Jo also adds that there is also some pleasant "notoriety" in being recognized at places away from the farm and this is something which she will miss.

Audrey and Joe reminisce as they review photos taken of the strawberry operation over the years.

Daughters, Mary Jo and Nancy, manning the weigh station.

Grandchildren, Justin Brown, Daniel Tweedy, and Sarah Tweedy picking berries.



Our daughter, riding along in the passenger seat of my little car, looked at me with a grin.

"You need one of those 'I brake for birds' bumper stickers," she suggested.

It had been about the third time in this straight stretch of country road that a bird lingered extra long, pecking at the gravel dotting the road. Each time, I'd hit the brakes of the car to avoid turning the reluctant flyers into feather dusters.

But we also brake for birds other than those directly on the pavement in front of us. Generally, though, only on back roads where we take less chance on being rear-ended by other gawking drivers.

Power-line sitting kestrels, eyeballing prey in hayfields and fencerows, cause us to brake, as do the telltale, broad, white breasts of red-tailed hawks perched in roadside trees awaiting a passing meal. We brake to enjoy families of Canada geese on neighborhood ponds, the flash of bluebird color flitting somewhere along a dirt road and sometimes come to a dead stop mid-road to identify some less-obvious winged friend.

Other critters command the brake-light warning as well: a rusty-red whitetail doe nibbling alfalfa at dusk, a glimpse of the bounding, bushy tail of a fox loping through tall grass, baby bunnies, squirrels, chipmunks, possums, even the occasional pedestrian turtle or snake.

Certain inanimate objects create the same reaction. A gorgeous flower bed or unusual planting causes an immediate gas-to-brake-pedal reaction when I'm behind the wheel. Farm equipment — especially something shiny-new or big — gets the same response from The Farmer. (It no longer surprises me when he hits the brake to make quick side trips around equipment lots en route to anywhere. King of impromptu, farmer window shopping.)

Thirty years of farm living has trained me to brake for stuff lying in the middle of the road that most drivers would ignore — at least along our local road. Things like hitch pins for hay wagons or any piece in red or green paint that looks like it belongs to a piece of equipment very well might — and is probably something The Farmer is looking for at that very moment.

Maybe what we really need is an "I brake for all kinds of stuff" bumper sticker. Including other drivers who slam on theirs to stop at yard sales.

Less than a mile from home one recent evening, he hit the truck brakes, did a double take in the rear-view mirror and incredulously said, "What was that?"

Search me. I've been admiring the neighbors' lush cornfields and hadn't seen a thing.

We did a quick turnaround at a side road to go back to investigate the object of his intense interest. A road kill.

But, not just any old road kill. A weasel. A beautiful little critter, with almost no damage to its physical appearance. First one I've ever seen. It went home with us on the truckbed, with hopes that a taxidermy specialist might be interested in the remains.

Two days later, he found another — maybe a littermate? — at almost the identical spot.

Where can I find an "I brake for road kill" bumper sticker?

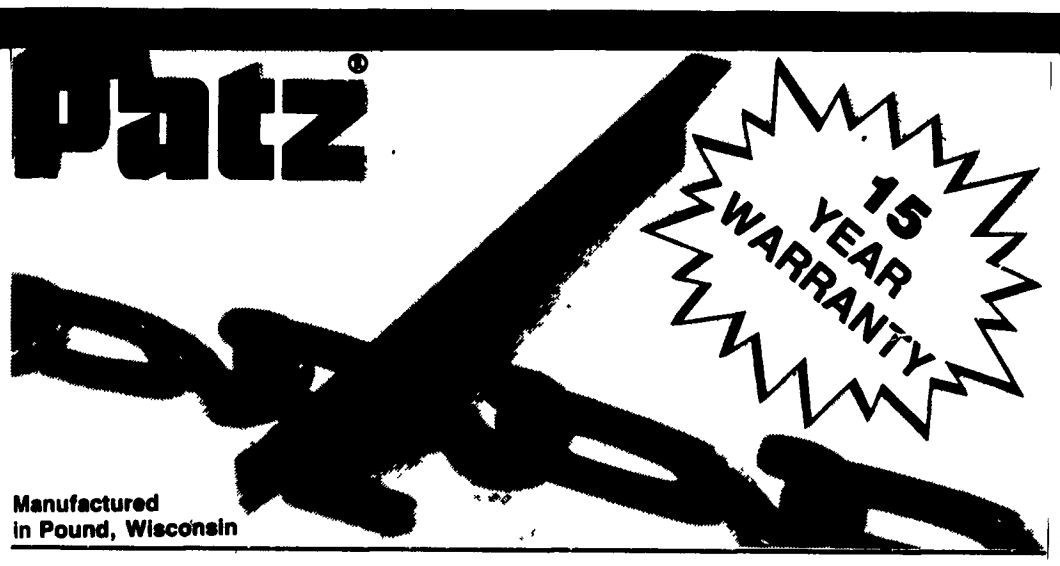
How Science Affects Chocolate

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Young folks ages 11 through 14 will "get a taste" of the science of chocolate in this class held at the Hershey Museum scheduled for Monday, August 14 through Thursday, August 17, from 9:30 - 11 a.m. Teacher Joan Bechtel will work with youngsters on a variety of experiments with chocolate and related products. The class illustrates how much science affects things we use in our everyday lives and is designed to be entertaining and informative.

Visiting resource people and a class trip behind the scenes at Chocolate World are on the agenda for the four-day experience. Dr. Frances Seligson, senior manager of nutrition and food safety for Hershey Foods Corporation, will work with the class on calculating calories in chocolate products and other nutrition-related activities. Information about Milton Hershey's many experiments, some successful, some not so successful, will be provided by Pam Cassidy archivist of the Hershey Community Archives.

Class size is limited. Registration is required and there is a class fee. For more information call (717) 534-3439.

Patz®



Manufactured in Pound, Wisconsin

Here is something often overlooked...

Only Patz gives you 45 years of experience with hook-and-eye chain, resulting in a chain so good that others are attempting to copy it.

Many Patz Gutter Cleaner chains are still working well after more than 30 years of use.

After the Patz patent on hook-and-eye chain expired, some other companies have attempted to copy the Patz chain. Some promote 10- and 12-year warranties on chain—but they have not yet had 10 or 12 years of experience with hook-and-eye chain.

Patz has continued to improve its chain for 45 years with special-formula steel, special forging techniques and special steel hardening processes.

Rely on the proven, long-life chain. Patz provides a 15-year chain warranty because so many chains are working well long after 15 years of use.

Better yet, your Patz chain warranty is backed up by a solid, reliable company that has been serving farmers for 45 years with the same family ownership.

Insist on Patz chain!

All Gardens Great & Small

by York Co. Horticultural Agent Tom Becker

COMMON SENSE GARDENING

This is the first in a series of articles on diagnosing and reducing pests in the garden. Serious disease and insect pests problems require quick identification and treatments.

Do you have a dying dogwood? Sick squash? Ill impatiens? Terminal turf? Don't know what's causing your plant problems? A pesticide may or may not be the solution.

Prudent gardeners won't wait for signs of damage before checking for insect and disease pests. For insects, look for eggs or egg masses on the undersides of leaves, and for the young insects on the leaves, stems and fruit. For diseases, look for bull's eye type spots with fungal spots in the center or blackened stem.

Before applying any pesticides, first identify the pest. Not all pesticides are effective against all garden pests and indiscriminate use of pesticides can be worse than using none at all.

But how do you spot the pesky bugs. Consider the damage bugs leave behind. Stunted vegetable plants, or plants that wilt during the day even with adequate water, may be infested with insects, like squash vine borers, root maggots, squash bugs, or white grubs. Imported cabbage worm, tomato horn worm and corn earworm leave gelatinous dark-green pellets of excrement on leaves, stems, and fruit. The squash vine borer entry hole exudes yellow sawdust-like frass as the pest tunnels within vines and stems.

Small round holes in the leaves may be the work of flea beetles, while winding trails on dead leaf tissue are an indication of leafminers. Flea beetles, a tiny black insect, jump away when disturbed.

Piercing, sucking insects such as thrips, aphids, leafhoppers, or spider mites cause leaves to turn yellow, brown, or look blotchy. Early injury appears as small yellow or white spots or stippling on the leaves.

Aphids are actually easy to spot. These soft-bodied, pear-shaped insects live on the undersides of leaves and the succulent parts of stems. They don't move when disturbed. Another indication of aphids could be the presence of ants on the plants: some species feed on aphid honeydew. Whenever ants are about, aphids are probably close by.

For disease problems in the garden, a clinic at Penn State is equipped to diagnose plant diseases caused by fungi, nematodes and microorganisms such as bacteria.

Visible symptoms might give you the first clue of a disease. But to confirm a gardener's diagnosis, the disease clinic may culture the material and look for microorganisms. For example for a tomato plant with leaf spots, the disease lab cultures a portion of the leaf in agar to see if a pathogen appears.

After lab tests are completed, a written diagnosis is returned. Copies of test results also are sent electronically to your county Extension office if you reside in Pennsylvania. This enables county extension professionals to stay abreast of disease problems and trends affecting growers and gardeners in their areas.

"We often see patterns emerge," sayd John Peplinski, the disease clinic coordinator.

"For instance, during late summer of 1994, we received a lot of diseased tomato samples from various areas of the state. As a result, the lab diagnosed several cases of late blight, a serious disease of tomatoes and potatoes."

If you have a plant disease or insect problem, contact your county extension office. In York County, our new phone number is (717) 840-7408.

MAMMA's supermarket check-out sign is certain to remind Mom or Dad of the consequences of returning home from food shopping without ice cream.

Supermarket Check-Out Sign To Enhance Ice Cream Sales

TOWSON, MD—As the weather heats up so do ice cream sales, and the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association (MAMMA) has a new merchandising tool to remind shoppers to purchase their favorite frozen treat. It's a sign featuring a young girl sitting in front of an empty bowl of ice cream. The grumpy expression on her face, coupled with the message printed on the sign calls out to the shopper, "You Forgot My Ice Cream."

The colorful 11"x8" sign is positioned at the end of a closed check out lane. In addition to the message in support of ice cream, the shopper also is informed to search for a check-out that is in operation.

The check-out placard is the newest item in MAMMA's long-term point-of-sale (POS) program. This program includes milk price boards used on top of the dairy-case; door signs that post the hours that a store is open; counter pads used at convenience stores; and temperature reminders for milk and ice cream for cooler doors with each item carrying a dairy promotion message.

By providing items that are useful to the retailer MAMMA not only achieves broad acceptance of the POS materials by supermarkets, but is assured that these items will remain on display for a long time. As a result, more consumers are influenced by that dairy product message.

Fellowship Of Christian Farmers Help Albanians

TRUMANSBURG, N.Y. — George and Julia Holmes, 3220 Jacksonville Road, Trumansburg, just returned from a 5½-week work crusade with Fellowship of Christian Farmers, Int. to Albania.

Albania is located in Eastern Europe, north of Greece. It has high Swiss-like mountains and flat valley area. Most all the land is farmed with a shovel and by the women. With temperatures around 50 degrees, the wheat fields were a lush green. The wheat is made into the country's main staple, bread.

The Holmes were joined by two groups of farmers that stayed two weeks each. They worked through Hope For the World, Pro Missions and New Hope Baptist Church of Tirana. Work projects included painting, window glass replacement, construction, remodeling, and general repairs.

Albania has been closed to missions work for more than 40 years. Last year the Holmes went to Albania as Pioneer group members. They were so impressed with the hospitality of the people, and their desire to learn about God and their eagerness to receive Bibles, they decided to return to Albania again this year.

"One Albanian lady shared she never expected to see an American in her home without a gun and bayonet. She welcomed us into her home, hugged and kissed us, with tears in her eyes," said Julia.

Albania has a two-party democracy, which is unstable and corrupt. They continue to deal with 70 percent unemployment. More and more squatters are moving from the mountain villages to seek a better life in the city. Traffic and garbage seemed to be worse this year than last. More stores were open and more of a variety of food is available on the market. Men and women have the freedom to vote. The general feeling is to elect a new president and cabinet to make some future positive changes. A lady shared, if communism returned, she would hang herself, rather than conform. So, the people of Albania truly value their freedom.

A 40' Sea Cargo Container put together in Trumansburg, N.Y., arrived between farmer groups. Boxes of clothes, shoes, coats, cloth diapers, school books and supplies, toys, paint, tools, bikes, lumber and building supplies, food, furniture and medicine were distributed. More than 250 Christmas "Shoe Boxes" were made up by area people and churches. One box was given to each orphan in three orphanages. The children were overjoyed to receive the items. Hats and mittens were tried on immediately and Teddy bears got big hugs. Diapers went to three baby orphanages and village mothers with babied.

The farmers spent time in small villages, passing out Bibles, children's Christian books, tracts, seed packs and hostess packs. Schools were visited also. The directors shared the needs of the schools. They need heat, window glass, doors, textbooks, lab equipment, maps and other things.

If you are interested in seeing slides of Albania as a group, or more information about joining a Fellowship of Christian Farmers, Int. work crusade to Mexico, Texas, Jamaica, Russia, Puerto Rico or Albania, please contact George and Julia Holmes, 3220 Jacksonville Road, Trumansburg, NY 14886 or (607) 387-5438.

Refreshing Ideas For Summer Fruits

On a hot summer day, there's nothing better than a cold slice of watermelon, a freshly sliced peach or a smattering of raspberries, blueberries, and cherries.

Not only is the taste of summertime fruit delectable, it's also good for you.

One medium peach is only 50 calories, contains no fat, yet provides 210 milligrams of potassium, 3.3 grams dietary fiber, and 12 grams carbohydrates.

Watermelon — 2 cups has only 90 calories, no fat and cholesterol and very little sodium. It's high in vitamin C, a good source of vitamin A (provides 100% of the recommended amount of beta carotene).

Fresh, raw fruit is always a healthy choice, but, seasoned cooks are always trying to improve on nature. Most fruits adapt well to baked desserts and salads, but little has been done with watermelon in the past. However, the National Watermelon Promotional Board is out to change that. They have brochures with recipes using watermelon for soup, salsa, punch, salads, desserts, and more.

If you are adventurous, send for recipes available from the National Watermelon Promotion Board, P.O. Box 140065, Orlando, Florida 32814-0065.

PEACH PUDDING

2 cups peaches

Line bottom of a greased floured pan with peaches. Mix together the following ingredients and pour batter over peaches:

½ cup sugar
4 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup flour
½ cup milk

Sift together over top of batter:

½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoons cornstarch OR Clear Jel

Pour boiling water over the whole combination. Bake at 325 degrees for 50-60 minutes. Serve with ice cream, cream, or milk. We also use cherries, blueberries or apples with brown sugar instead of granulated sugar on the top.

Very delicious! I am eight years old. My mom makes this a lot in the summer with fresh fruits. I live on a dairy farm. My dad milks around 60 cows. We have two rabbits. Their names are Candy and Sandy.

FRUIT TRIFLE

1 package yellow or white cake mix

16-ounces strawberry or raspberry halves, thawed

1 package vanilla pudding prepared as directed

Mix and bake layer cake as directed on package. Cool. Use only half. Reserve other half for another dessert.

Cut cake into 8 pieces. Split each piece horizontally. Arrange pieces on the bottom of a 2-quart dish or trifle dish, cutting pieces to fit. Pour half the fruit with syrup over the cake. Spread 1 cup pudding mix. Repeat with remaining cake, fruit, and pudding. Cover, chill at least 4 hours.

Whip 1 cup cream and ¼ cup sugar. Serve over trifle. Sprinkle with slivered almonds or other nuts.

If you have extra cake, you can arrange some on sides of dish. Looks pretty served in a glass bowl. Any fruit will work but red fruit looks best.

Watermelon is rich in beta carotene and lycopene, which scientists have identified as powerful cancer fighters.

A cold slice of watermelon is hard to improve upon. But the National Watermelon Promotion Board would like to encourage consumers to try it in salads, as an appetizer, as a drink, in an ice cream pie, and a variety of other ways.

A brochure filled with novel recipes and a recipe for an old favorite — pickled watermelon like your grandmother used to make — is available from the National Watermelon Promotion Board. The color brochure also has ideas and tips for carving, selecting, and storing watermelon.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

About this time of year I think of my uncle and aunt who took me along to pick huckleberries when I was a child. We drove to the Welsh Mountains in eastern Lancaster County. They knew a family that lived back in the mountains. The older man and his mother had a well with an oaken bucket which was very interesting to me.

The mother knew where the nicest berries grew but did not share this knowledge. So, we took our pails and hunted for the small bushes with their small berries. It took me hours to pick a gallon but they were very tasty and I probably ate some.

Lunch with this family of relatives was a real treat as they were very good cooks. I'm ashamed to admit it but as a child I, one time, ate so much at their table that I felt sick. You see, I was not accustomed to having cherry pie, angel food cake, tapioca, graham cracker pudding, and fruit for dessert. Yet, these family members were all as thin as toothpicks. I never could understand that.

Our own blueberries are ready to pick now. We have had to replace several bushes as some died. The last few years I've turned over the job of pruning them to someone else and it did not get done.

My cucumbers look as though they will give a bumper crop if nothing happens to them. They take a lot of attention as I like to pick them when they are small. Some of the grandchildren profess to liking them a lot and even ask for a jar of canned ones to take home with them. Of course, I'm glad to oblige if I have some. This year I should add to my supplies.

1 cup boiling water

Mix sugar, salt, and cornstarch. Turn dry mixture over the batter. Then pour 1 cup boiling water over top.

Bake at 375 degrees one hour. Serve warm, topped with a small serving of vanilla ice cream or a whipped cream topping or plain. Serves 8.

Dietary Studies Confirm Health Benefits Of Soyfood

SALISBURY, Md. — For Americans looking for a diet plan that provides protection against a multitude of diseases and conditions, there is good news. There is a single food source that supplies generous amounts of essential nutrients in addition to being a healthful source of anti-cancer compounds.

It's soybeans.

In essence, the food we think of mostly as "feed" would be better served on our own plates, and with good reason. Soyfoods are high in vitamins, especially B vitamins, contain the fatty acids essential to human health, and have the same or more soluble fiber as oat bran. In addition, soybeans are high in folic acid, which prevents birth defects; and are high in lysine, iron, calcium, and zinc.

They are also the only vegetable that contains "complete" protein. Soybeans supply all eight amino acids needed for human health, and because they are a plant food, they contain no cholesterol.

"Evidence from dietary studies shows, time and again, the vast health benefits of eating soy," says Dr. Mark Messina, a leading authority in the field of soyfoods and cancer prevention and a lecturer for "The Soy Connection," a seminar for dietitians sponsored by the Maryland Soybean Board in March.

The Maryland Soybean Board administers funds from the soybean checkoff, which sets aside a portion of the sale of each bushel of soybeans for research, marketing and educational activities such as the seminar.

In addition to the more-familiar nutrients mentioned above, soybeans also are chock full of a new class of food substances called "phytochemicals."

Phytochemicals are components of plant foods that are not nutrients but do affect health. They are one of the reasons why the National Cancer Institute now recommends five servings of fruits and vegetables a day.

One of the best known phytochemicals is "beta carotene," which has been widely publicized as an anti-cancer agent. Soyfoods can go one better. One phytochemical unique to soybeans is being researched as a potential new anti-cancer drug, and Messina says studies show that just one serving of soyfoods a day may be enough to obtain the benefits of it.

What makes soyfoods so great is that their phytochemical profile shows they provide levels of phytochemicals not available by eating practical amounts of other foods, Messina says.

While it is not yet fully understood how soyfoods can effect such a positive change in health, clinical studies and observations of countries where soyfoods are a regular part of the diet bear out the anti-disease claim.

For example, a study in Japan showed that eating soybeans or tofu cut the risk of rectal cancer by more than 80 percent, and soybeans and tofu lowered colon-cancer risk by about 40 percent. In the study, just one to two servings of soy per week gave considerable protection.

Even better, the cancer preventive benefits of soyfoods extend beyond the digestive tract. A study of almost 1,500 men in China found that the risk of lung cancer was about 50 percent lower with frequent tofu consumption.

Soyfoods have been shown to prevent or improve other health conditions, too, including high cholesterol levels, heart disease, diabetes, high blood pressure, gall stones, kidney disease, and osteoporosis.

The people who benefited the most from soy were the people with the highest cholesterol levels.

A study of Japanese women who ate two ounces a day of soybean or soybean-containing foods found the women reported fewer hot flashes and other symptoms of menopause than women in North America and other countries not eating soy foods. Soy phytochemicals may partially mimic the activity of human hormones, such as estrogen, researchers say. (Estrogen plays key roles in the female reproductive system and in the menstrual cycle, but is also thought to be a factor in hormone-related cancers, including breast cancer.) The phytoestrogen in soyfoods, weaker than its human-produced counterpart, may block the absorption of high quantities of estrogen, protecting against cancer and easing the roller-coater effect on hormonal levels during menopause.

With all this evidence of soy's health benefits, the question is no longer whether to include soyfoods in the diet, but, "How often is best?"

In many studies, the likelihood of getting cancer was shown to be cut in half for people who ate a serving of soyfoods daily in comparison to those consuming soyfoods only once or twice per week or less. In the study of Chinese men, the more often tofu was consumed, the lower the risk. So, setting a goal of eating at least a full serving per day might be best, Messina suggests.

They All Screamed For Ice Cream

BALLY (Berks Co.) — You scream, I scream, they all screamed for ice cream at St. Francis Academy in Bally, Berks County, recently.

On Dairy Day students learned how milk benefits them in work, study and play. Later that afternoon they experienced how good good nutrition can taste.

Berks County Dairy Princess Jennifer Davis of Leesport, entertained grades 4 through 7 with a baseball theme skit that compared milk to how you would bat in a baseball game.

"Without milk, you strike out. If you drink your three glasses of milk a day, it's like scoring a homerun."

Boyertown native Carrie Hetrick, alternate dairy princess from Berks County, explained how milk can enhance students' abilities to study, work and play.

Dairy Maids from Bucks and Montgomery counties taught 1st, 2nd and 3rd grades all about milk, from moo to you. They showed them a video that explained: which states produce milk, the vitamins in milk and what they do for you, the different dairy products, how milk gets from the cow to the grocery store, how much water a cow drinks in a day, how many children equal the weight of a cow.

Dairy maids participating in the afternoon's activities were Rachel Moyer of Perkasie, Jennifer Lear of Pipersville, Katie Sterner of Bechtelsville, Karen Wolfgang of Bechtelsville, and Lizzie Moser of Gilbertsville.

Then it was time for fun.

The students at St. Francis Academy cheered their teachers as they helped build the giant, 30-gallon ice cream sundae. It took about 20 minutes to build — complete with syrup, peanuts, sprinkles and cherries — and about 20 minutes to serve the entire student body.

"It even looked like a sundae," noted second-grader Christopher Franges, Barto. "It was really neat. We were even allowed to go up for seconds," added Robert Kelly.

Second-grade teacher Joan Kelsch said, "It was fun, educational, and a sweet ending to the school year."

Principal Deacon Thomas Murphy, who emceed the proceedings, noted, "Everyone helped in making this day a success, from the teachers, maintenance men, secretaries and students."

This event was sponsored by the Berks and Bucks/Montgomery Counties Dairy Promotion Groups. The ice cream was supplied by Longacre's Dairy in Barto.

For more information on the dairy promotion groups, please call Tanya Baldwin (215) 766-4941.

Longacre's supply the ice cream that Sharon Bishop, left, and first-grade teacher Margaret Gehringer dish into a child's swimming pool.

Baa Baa Blvd. Is Home For Lamb and Wool Queen

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

FAIRHOPE (Somerset Co.) — There was a time when Kami Hillegass, the 1995 Somerset County Lamb and Wool Queen, would never have allowed a bite of cooked lamb to enter her mouth.

Lambs are darling creatures that you grew attached to during your 4-H projects. You could shear them for the wool, that wasn't so awful. But have them for dinner? No way!

Her parents, Dan and Karen Hillegass, and brothers Heath, 18 and Brock, 14, were tougher. Their lamb went down easily, with nary a sad lump to hinder each swallow.

If only Kami would sample it, they believed she'd like its taste.

One evening during dinner Brock asked his sister, "How do you like your "la..." (mom delivered a warning kick to his shin under the table) "... ham?" he finished, sheepishly.

Kami was completely oblivious to anything unusual.

Weeks later, while working together in the barn, Kami asked her mom, "When are you going to make that ham again? "It was so good."

That's when she learned she'd been duped by the zesty dish. She still takes some teasing over the incident, but being a good sport, and a smart one, she plans to tell a lot of good folks that eating lamb is okay. And her own story may help to convince them.

"I was scared to death to eat lamb. I had to be tricked because they (the sheep) lived in my barn."

She says people should know that lamb offers cooks scads of interesting menu possibilities such as chops, leg of lamb roasts, ribs, and bologna.

"I don't think many people know about sheep and what their purpose is," her ovine royalty states, "but I'm going to tell them that sheep are dual-purpose animals."

That, of course, brings up the weighty subject of wool, for which the bleaters are also known, and the endless assortment of clothing and other products derived from it.

Now 16, Kami still fits into the wool sweater made for her at age 11. The reversible garment was woven from the wool of her first breeding ewe by Cynthia Slatcoff. And rather than dye it some bright shade, the decision was unanimous to keep it natural. Beeny bits of straw are still visible in the cherished memento.

When she received her new title a few weeks ago, Kami had presented an informal skit about herself to the guests. They had gathered at the Oakhurst Tea Room, Routh 31, west of Somerset.

Eight years in the Milksquirts 4-H Club gave her plenty to tell them, what with cooking and sewing projects, sheep demonstrations, food revues and fashion revues behind her.

Her breeding sheep and market lambs have done well, but 1993 was the banner year, chocked full of good stuff.

Hers was the Home Grown Champion lamb at the Somerset County Fair that year. "Home Grown" she explains is where the direct family owns the breeding ram and the shower's ewe is registered in his or her own name.

Earlier, it had won the reserve grand champion title at the Somerset County Lamb Jackpot Show.

Then, too, her pig was a county fair group grand champion.

Winning the 1990 Keystone Leadline Competition at Harrisburg was super. So was the 1988 Junior Registered Leadline competition sponsored by the Somerset County Lady Shepherds.

Today, because the family is so busy with other interests, only three breeding ewes and one ram remain in the small barn, quite a drop from when 12 to 14 ewes were kept.

Lambing time had gotten to be a stressful scenario, especially when unsteady twins and triplets seemed to be arriving every minute and there weren't enough human bodies to balance the numbers for their care.

Yet, Karen, who puts home and family above all else, says, "We enjoy this as a family project. But you get attached to them (lambs)."

For queen Kami, who resides at "BAA BAA BLVD," according to the Hillegass entry sign, the pangs of loss still sting when on of her babies has to leave. But the reality is Kami's future and college. The Suffolk sideline undergirds her education fund as does her part-time cashiering job at the local Riverside supermarket.

Like most worthwhile things, generating interest among the young is a perpetual responsibility. The sheep and wool industry is no different. Kami wants to focus her attention on the juniors. "I'm going to encourage beginning kids (new 4-Hers) to start with lambs," said the Berlin-Brothersvalley cheerleader.

Once upon a time she toyed with the idea of doing a steer project, had even given it a shot. When it bombed, she was certain, "I wanted the cute little lambs."

A high school junior, she's also in the bell choir at the Berlin Brethren Church.

Kami reports having a schedule of upcoming parades and appearances. One, is "Somerset County Day at the Farm," on July 2, and the Somerset County Lamb Jackpot Show at the fairgrounds in Meyersdale on June 17. She'll be bestowing handsome ribbons and trophies on deserving winners.

The promoter says she will gladly share the recipe by which she was tricked into eating lamb. In fact, she's counting on a great many converts when the home chefs, summoning great patience, prepare it.

The sweater worn by Kami Hillegass was made from the wool of her first breeding ewe when she was 11. She is 16 now, but the sweater still fits and suits current fashion styles.

ARIZONA LEG OF LAMB

1 (5 to 7 lbs.) boned, rolled and tied leg of lamb
1 cup wine vinegar
1 cup vegetable oil
2 cloves whole garlic
1 bay leaf, crumbled
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon rosemary
1 teaspoon sage
½ teaspoon crushed pepper
3 each: large potatoes, onions (quartered); large chiles or peppers (sliced).

Combine vinegar, oil and seasonings. Pour over lamb. Cover and marinate in refrigerator 12 to 24 hours, turning often. Remove lamb, strain marinade and reserve. Place potatoes, onions, chiles and garlic in shallow roasting pan. Pour ¼ cup of marinade over vegetables. Place lamb on roasting rack over vegetables. Pour ¼ cup marinade over lamb. Roast at 325 degrees for approximately 25 minutes per pound, or until meat thermometer registers 140 degrees F. for rare, or 150 to 155 degrees F. for medium rare. Baste with ¼ cup marinade every 20 to 30 minutes. Allow lamb to rest 15 minutes before carving.

Avoid After-Lunch Slump

It's 2:00 p.m. and you know you shouldn't have eaten that fettuccine Alfredo for lunch today. You've heard time and time again that big meals cause drowsiness. Sure enough, now that it's the afternoon, you feel stuffed, things are beginning to get blurry, and you'd like nothing better than to take a nap.

Is it the lunch, or just the time of day? It's probably some of both. Laboratory experiments show that alertness and the ability to perform tasks drop off during mid-afternoon, whether you eat lunch or not. On the other hand, studies also suggest that for some people, meals high in carbohydrates such as pasta and bread release certain chemicals in the brain called neurotransmitters, which are thought to cause drowsiness. Other factors, such as age and sleep habits also contribute to mid-day drowsiness.

While there may be no magical cure for afternoon drowsiness, certain eating habits can lead to fatique over the long run. To avoid this, try the following:

•Don't skip meals. Food is fuel, which means that if you miss meals and wait until you're "starving" to eat, your body will literally run out of gas. Try to eat regularly and in moderation.

•Don't expect sugary foods to give you an energy boost. The body responds to a large dose of sugar, as in a candy bar or soft drink, by releasing insulin, which in turn works to lower blood sugar. The result often leaves you more tired than you were before.

•Eat a diet rich in iron. Chronic weariness is an earmark of a longstanding iron deficiency, a mineral many Americans, women in particular, don't get in sufficient amounts. That's why it's especially important to include iron-rich items like meat, legumes, dark green vegetables, and iron-fortified cereals in your daily diet.

Father-In-Law's Advice Pays Off For Nut Grower

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — When Miles Nolt purchased his first farm in 1954, his father-in-law advised him to plant nut trees right away.

"You might think you don't have the money," his father told him, "but in the years to come, you'll be glad you planted the trees and you won't miss the money."

Miles planted two nut trees the first year and gradually planted more until eventually 100 trees were planted at his Manheim farm.

During the years, Miles learned a lot about nuts, planting and maintaining nut trees, and growing prize-winning nuts in competition. But it's his ability to graft trees successfully that keeps him in demand for demonstrating and teaching others.

Miles is modest when it comes to taking credit for being an expert tree grafter. He said, "I don't know everything. There's always more to learn."

Trees are grafted to preserve and propagate desirable and superior cultivars of a species. Nut trees generally do not produce as well when planted from seed. A desired variety must be either grafted or budded on seedling rootstocks or on branches of established trees.

According to Miles, grafted trees produce better nuts than trees started from seed. They also bear in about half the time that it takes a tree that grows naturally. Some trees are better stock than others. English walnuts are grafted into black walnut trees since they have a better root system.

In grafting, wood is spliced in both the grafted sign wood and the seedling. Miles measures the diameter of the wood because the more perfect size match, the better the chance that the grafting will be successful.

At one time, Miles simply spliced the wood. But recently, he invested in a splicer that puts a notch in the wood for a tight fit.

The grafted part is coated with melted grafting wax and wrapped with a grafting rubber.

For English and black walnut grafts, the sign wood is cut off several weeks before the actual grafting takes place so that the sap dries. Miles typically cuts sign wood in January and February and stores it in a wet paper towel placed in a tightly closed plastic bag in the refrigerator until he is ready to graft, usually around this time of the year.

Miles cautions that cut sign wood should not be stored in the refrigerator with apples.

"Apples throw off a gas that puts sign wood to sleep," he said.

Pecan, hickory, and some other nut varieties are not cut in advance of grafting.

It takes about two weeks after grafting to determine if the grafting was successful. This is discernable by the new sprouts that appear.

The side shoots must be removed every two weeks or the strength of the tree will grow into the sprouts instead of the graft.

Today, July 15, The Pennsylvania Nut Growers Association is holding a picnic at the John and Marilyn Keefer farm located north of Harrisburg in Juniata County, where grafting will be demonstrated.

About 200 people belong to the Pennsylvania Nut Growers Association.

Miles said that he had his first introduction to grafting at a picnic.

"It's the best place to go to learn about grafting and nut growing," he said.

"When nut guys get together, we talk for hours. We never get done talking," Miles said.

Irene said that it is not unusual for her husband to receive numerous phone calls from strangers wanting to know more about grafting and nuts.

"They're talk for 2½ hours or more on the phone," she said.

"It's the only way you learn," Miles said of the need for nut growers to compare experiences on what works and what doesn't work.

Grafted nursery trees are rather expensive, so many people want to learn to graft their own trees.

Some trees produce better nuts than others. If Miles finds a good one, he grafts it. The process is thought to be difficult, but if care is taken, success is attainable.

Of the many different varieties of nuts grown, Miles said that his favorite is a shellbark.

"Lots of people think tht you can't raise pecans here but you can," Miles said of the bushels of pecans he has collected. The pecans must be of the Northern variety. More than one tree must be planted because pecan trees are not self-pollinating.

Black walnuts are run through a corn sheller to get the hulls off.

Miles can easily identify an assortment of varieties such as Broad View English Walnuts and Coble's #2 merely by looking at the nuts. Some of the large walnuts from the trees that he has grafted are almost two-inches in diameter.

In order to grow fruit and nuts successfully, it's important where a tree is planted. Miles said that nut trees grow best when planted on low ground, especially along a creek bed.

Trees should be fertilized annually with 20-10-10 fertilizer. English walnut trees should be limed. Pecans, shellbarks, and black walnuts should not be sprayed.

Miles has also been growing Oriental persimmons for 35 years. For better flavor and a seedless variety, Miles grafts the Oriental varieties onto the American persimmon.

"Persimmons are something one gets use to. I didn't like them at first, but I learned to really like them," he said.

Miles retired from full-time farming a few years ago. He and his wife, Irene, purchased a home in the borough of Manheim and planted more nut trees. The Nolts' son now farms the land, but Miles continues to help out with the farm work and when he isn't helping on the farm, he's patiently shelling nuts and packaging them.

"It's a hobby that pays," Miles said of the satisfaction he derives from gathering and shelling the nuts.

"But you can't make a living off of it. Most people in the nut business are retired."

He spends about two months shelling pecans in the basement, beginning at 6 a.m. and ending at 10 p.m.

Nuts Are Good For You

According to an article from the Society of Ontario Nut Growers, nuts are capable of sustaining life. They have a high protein content and are rich in iron and calcium.

Pecans are high in phosphorus, potassium, and magnesium. Hazelnuts, chestnuts, walnuts, pecans, and almonds have about 2½ times as much iron as fruit, three times that of vegetables and more than cereals and many meats. Nuts are more than twice as rich in blood-builing material as meat, and well supplied with bone-building elements that are lacking in meat.

Vitamins A and B are plentifully supplied by English walnuts, pecans, chestnuts, almonds, pine nuts, filberts, hazelnuts, and hickory nuts. Most raw nuts are rich in polyunsaturated oils, finely divided so that they form emulsions making them digestible and more easily assimilated by the digestive organs. (Roasting makes nuts harder to digest).

Nuts are high in starch and sugar, which make them high in energy values. Two ounces of pecan kernels equal a pound of lean beef in the production of energy. Nuts produce more substantial food value per acre than any other crop.

On winter months, one can find 78-year-old Miles Nolt cracking walnuts from early morning to late at night at the set up he has created in the basement of his home. His wife Irene packs the nuts in jars to enter at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, where Miles is a consistent first-place winner.

While her husband cracks nuts, Irene sews wedding gowns and "everything else." She has had a sewing business for 40 years. She also teaches bread baking to Farm Women, church, and community groups.

After grafting, Miles Nolt coats the grafted area with wax to protect it from the weather. Bees wax cannot be used because insects would devour it.

Grafted trees usually produce better nuts than those started from seeds. Because black walnut trees have a better root system, grafting an English walnut branch into it produces a better tree in about half the time it takes for a naturally-growing tree to produce nuts.

Nut Grower

While some folks find shelling nuts tedious and time consuming, Miles thrives on the work.

"It's a good stress reliever. Too many people worry about things they can't do anything about," he said.

He has a table set up in the basement where he shells the nuts. He often watches car racing and football while shelling the nuts.

The Nolts are able to sell all the nuts locally.

"There's a big demand. Some people are eating nuts in place of meat."

Miles said that many more nut trees should be planted. One of the ways that nut tree growing is encouraged is the rule that applies to winners at the State Farm Show competition.

"If one wins first prize, he must give sign wood to whoever wants it," Miles said.

About 30 to 40 people enter the 400 categories available annually at the Farm Show. Most categories require about 20 samples of nuts. The shellbark categories require 30.

The judge cracks three from each exhibitor. Those that are filled out the best and the same size are considered winners.

Irene prepares the shelled nuts by attractively arranging them in glass jars. She uses a tweezers to place each one.

It's no coincidence that Miles is a consistent winner in the nut competition at the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Miles generally wins 15 first-place ribbons at the State Farm Show. Although some people receive more first placings, Miles is often the recipient of "Best of Show" awards.

The Nolts are married 54 years and have four married children and nine grandchildren.

The couple arises at 5 a.m. During the warmer months Miles helps on the farm by doing most of the tractor work and helping with 100 heifers.

Irene begins her day by taking a 2½ mile walk every morning before daybreak. She has a sewing business, including bridal gowns, and teaches breadbaking to church and women's groups.

"The younger generation often doesn't know how to bake bread. I demonstrate making whole wheat bread, and then tell the audience to go home and bake some before they forget how to do it," Irene said.

Irene volunteers at an International Gift and Thrift Shop in Mount Joy, in the library for Landis Homes, and in the sewing circle for her church.

She is president of Farm Women Society 5, where she has been a member for eight years.

The couple take day trips and have spent some time in Florida, Kentucky, Red Lake and Minnesota, but these are usually combined with nut growing.

Credit Reports: You Can Run, But Can't Hide

Credit reporting bureaus are linking up and sharing increasing amounts of information on consumers.

What this means for the consumer is that you can run, but you cannot hide. Even if you relocate to the other coast, your credit history will follow you.

In the early days of credit use, it was not uncommon for each county to have its own credit bureau; now, three national bureaus process most of the requests for credit information on individuals.

This does provide some benefit to consumers. For instance, it is easier now to get a complete record of your credit history. You may need to inquire at only one credit reporting bureau, not several. Even if you've lived in many different locations, your credit history may be already centralized.

Facilitating obtaining a credit card and, therefore, getting credit, if eligible, is the good side of linking credit information among bureaus. The down side is that if you've had problems with credit, that will likely follow you wherever you go. Relocating will not bury the past.

All the more reason to periodically check your credit history and make sure it is accurate and up-to-date. Even if you've never had problems, you need to check your credit history. Remember, mistakes happen. Inaccurate information, or even bits and pieces of someone else's credit problems, can be mistakenly attached to your credit history. The time to discover potential problems is before, not after, you've applied for a mortgage or other form of credit.

The three major credit bureaus are TRW, Trans Union, and Equifax. Check in the Yellow Pages under credit reporting agencies to see which serves this area. Then write to one of them for information. You will need to include your full name, address, and zip code, other addresses you have used within the last five years, Social Security number, date of birth, spouse's name, and a photocopy of your driver's license or other photo ID. A fee may be charged for your report.

TRW will send you a free copy of your credit report when you send them the required information. A form requesting a report can be obtained by calling Penn State Cooperative Extension at 394-6851.

When requesting a report for yourself, you should also request one for your spouse. If all credit accounts are in one person's name, the spouse may be left without a credit history if divorced or widowed. It is important to have an account in each person's name.

The fair will be held Thursday, August 10 through Saturday, August 12. The fair is open to the public on Thursday from 5 p.m. -9:30 p.m., Friday from 9 a.m. to 9:30 p.m., and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

A parking donation of $3 is requested to help defray costs. You won't find commercial rides here, but good old wholesome fun — animal shows, exhibits of completed 4-H projects, bands, game booths run by the 4-H'ers themselves, and hands-on, get-involved fun.

On Thursday evening, opening ceremonies and the banner parade begin at 6 p.m. followed by the sheep show at 6:30 p.m. From 6:30 p.m.-9:30 p.m. you can learn country western dancing from an experienced instructor. There are pony rides for the kids, beginning at 7 p.m. as well as a horseless horse show. In this event, the participant is a "rider" from the waist up and a "horse" from the waist down while they participate in real horse show type classes. Demonstrations will be presented before the start of the activity.

Other highlights of that evening include the introduction of the outstanding 4-H members and scholarship presentations. Indoor exhibits include crafts, foods, woodworking, clothing and a wide variety of 4-H and open class entries. The indoor exhibits are open until 9:30 p.m.

On Friday, rabbits, dairy cows, steers, Seeing Eye puppies, pigs and cats will exhibited. In the evening, the band "Latigo Smith" will perform from 7 p.m.-10 p.m. with their great brand of foot-stomping music. In between these exhibitions, "Make It and Take It" project sessions will be held as well as a fun Olympics for the children. From 4 p.m.-8 p.m. as well as Saturday from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. sewers can rummage through the Giant Fabric Sale, benefiting the 4-H Center. For those with hearty appetites, at 6 p.m. the world's largest sausage patty will be cooked and sold by Hatfield Quality Meats, celebrating their 100th birthday this year. A rocket launch is also set for 6 p.m. 4-H Alumni are especially being sought for the welcoming reception from 8 p.m.-9 p.m.

To close the Fair on Saturday, the 4-H Goat Show and the 4-H Horse Demonstrations and Drill Teams will be featured. The Deep Creek Cloggers will perform at noon, followed by the Dog Obedience show. The Celebrity Goat Milking Contest at 12:15 p.m. will feature local celebrities vying for this year's championship title.

To round out the day, a pet show consisting of domestic animals will be featured. All area youth are invited to bring their pets and participate in this event (no poultry or livestock allowed). All animals in the pet show must have current rabies and other vaccinations as required for their species. Registration begins at 2 p.m. and show is set for 2:30 p.m. Don't forget to stop by the Fashion Revue at 3:30 p.m. The Fair concludes at 4:30 p.m.

Projects such as sewing, rocketry, electronics, foods, and small engines will also be displayed throughout the three days. Club game booths will also be operating at certain times during the fair. It is guaranteed to be an enjoyable time for all, and don't be surprised if you hear an oink, baa, bark, meow, or squeak during your trip to the Montgomery County 4-H Fair.

For more information and a more detailed schedule, call the 4-H Office at (610) 489-4315.

Low-Fat Calories Count

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)—As a nation, we've gotten the message to eat less fat and cholesterol, but we are still heavier than ever. Cholesterol intake and fat consumption has dropped from a high of 40 percent of calories in the 1960s to about 34 percent of calories today. Despite this statistic, waistlines have continued to expand to the point where one in three Americans now weighs more than 20 percent above the ideal weight. Why do we continue to pile on the pounds?

Calories appear to be the major culprit. We may be eating fewer calories as fat, but we're eating more calories than ever. According to government surveys, the average daily caloric intake among Americans increased from 1,969 in 1978 to 2,200 in 1990. While this may seem like a modest increase, it converts to a potential weight gain of 24 pounds per year.

In 1991 and 1992 alone, supermarket shelves bulged with almost 2,500 new reduced-fat and fat-free products. Americans seemed convinced that if it was fat-free, it also must be calorie-free. It's now time for a reality check. The biggest problem with the "eat all that you want as long it's low-fat" theory appears to be just that: "eating all that you want."

What's the bottom line? Reducing the fat in the diet is still an important component of any weight management plan, and reduced-fat and fat-free foods can help. But don't use the "fat-free" label as a license to eat as much as you want of a product. It may be just as high in total calories as its regular fat counterpart.

FFA HAPPENINGS

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — For the 8th straight year, a team from the Twin Valley FFA has won the Berks County Envirothon.

This team, composed of Tara Plewa, Melissa Makris, Rebecca Duncan, Chad Steffy and Larry Medaglia, is eligible to compete in the Pennsylvania state envirothon. Team members are students in agricultural science classes at Twin Valley taught by Ronald Frederick.

The Berks County envirothon is one of approximately 60 held across Pennsylvania and sponsored by the county soil conservation district.

Jack Shonely, district manager of the Berks County Conservation District, serves as the chairperson for this event.

The Envirothon consists of five different test stations - soils, forestry, aquatics, wildlife and a special topic each year. This year's special topic was groundwater, with the Department of Environmental Resources in charge. Other stations are run by the appropriate state agency - Pennsylvania Game Commission, Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission, Soil Conservation Service, and Bureau of Forestry.

At each station, each team completes a test which consists of both written and practical questions. For example, students are asked to identify wildlife mounts and trees, tell how to manage a soil for a given use, and explain how acid rain may affect groundwater.

Other Twin Valley teams included Aaron Teter, Kevin Bezler, Matt Perini, Alyssa Taylor, Rebecca Gardner, Holly Smoker, Ryan Smathers, Megan Binasiewicz, Megan Ferguson, and Josh Lawrey.

Lamb On the Menu

Shepherd's Farm Restaurant Began As Produce Stand

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

CONFLUENCE (Somerset Co.) — With a splendid view of the Casselman River, rolling green hills dotted with fleecy white sheep, and picturesque red buildings set amidst tall maples, Al and Shirley Knoblach have the perfect setting for a restaurant.

"It started with vegetables and fruit, and progressed to lamb," she admits, eyes sparkling as she tells her story. "We started more than 20 years ago raising produce and selling it a roadside stand overlooking the river. Only problem was that every time we had a good year, so did everyone else. And, who wants tomatoes when everyone already has them."

Shirley knew she had to offer something extra, and began making tomato sauces, canned jellies, and various other fruits and vegetables concoctions. "We sold them from a picnic table with a roof over it. One summer evening, we had a bad storm and the picnic table was swept down the bank almost ending up in the river.

"It was time to fish or cut bait and our first carryout restaurant was built that same year. We used those canned sauces and relishes on sandwiches."

For more than 15 years, the entire Knoblach family worked at that carryout including two daughters and two sons. "The kids worked their way through college working at our carryout," Shirley remembers.

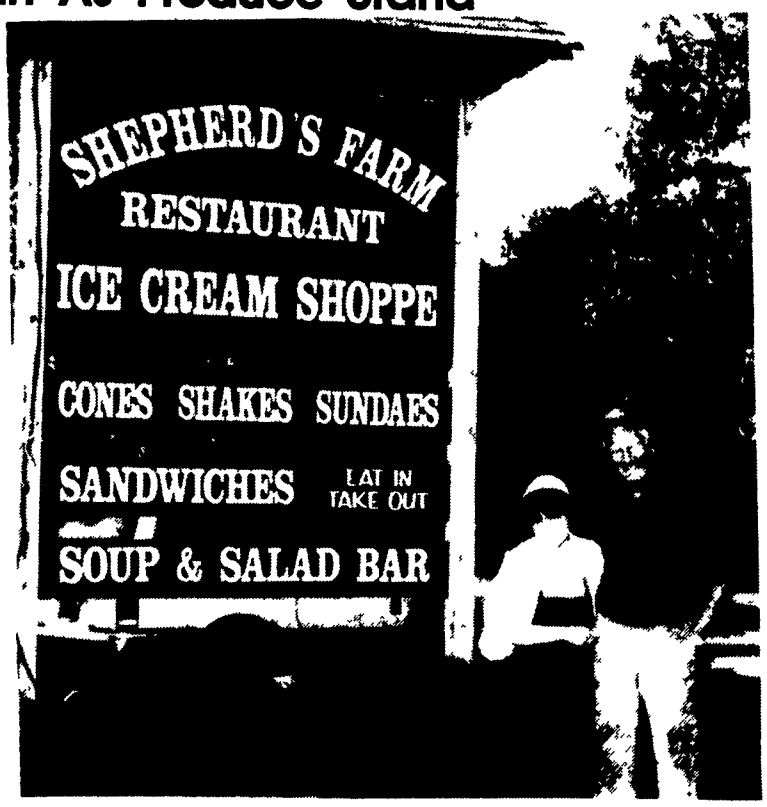
Meanwhile, Albert got into the sheep business. When Shirley realized what lamb was bringing at market and what it sold for in the stores, she set about to eliminate the middle man.

Getting the organically grown sheep USDA inspected and butchered, Shirley offered lamb dishes taste tempting enough to attract even those who declare they will never eat lamb.

Menu offers include roast lamb sandwiches served warm on a toasted homemade bun with grilled onions and a choice of barbecue or horseradish sauce.

Lamb pita, a big hit with the younger generation, includes seasoned ground lamb on warm pita bread with lettuce, tomato, onion, and horseradish sauce.

A lamb sub comes with sliced roast lamb sauteed with peppers and onions, melted provolone, and a milk horseradish sauce and the gourmet burger is seven ounces of ground lamb on a toasted roll with lettuce, tomato, onion, pickles and mayo.



Al and Shirley Knoblach outside their Shepherd's Farm Restaurant and ice cream shoppe.

For the heartier appetite, there's a roast lamb dinner or herbed lamb stew.

Lamb is not the only meat item on the menu, but it is a calling card and has proved to be an excellent market for the Knoblach flock.

The Knoblachs also sell frozen lamb including leg of lamb, ground lamb, rib or loin chops, riblets, or shoulder chops.

Suggestions for cooking come packaged with each purchase, or, a lamb feast sampler includes a sampling of each.

"We've found it to be a real advantage to have our own market," Shirley says. "And, at the same time, feel we are helping the public become acquainted with how good lamb can taste."

The restaurant has also provided an outlet for sheepskins. "We just can't keep them in stock," said Shirley. "I always keep my ears tuned, and when I hear a young couple exclaim over the softness and thickness of the skins but wonder how they would use them, I offer suggestions.

"Think how nice they would be on the bathroom floor or to cuddle up on in front of the fire," I say. "Or, use them on a car seat and babies love them."

Shepherd's Farm has a flock of 120 breeding ewes including mixed Suffolk, Polypay, and Dorsets. "The Polypay is not a common breed," Al says. "But, we get lots of nice lambs out of them."

Practicing pasture management on 190 acres of picturesque Pennsylvania farmland between Confluence and Somerset, Al has movable fences which allow the sheep to graze most of the year.

"We do make our own hay and supplement the ewes' diets with alfalfa pellets when they are about to lamb," Al adds. "But, we've found our sheep are so much healthier when they are kept out of doors as much as possible."

Even the winter of 1993-94 didn't bring all of the sheep into the snug red barn. "We waded through the snow up to the hillside to see if they were OK," Shirley remembers. "And, they were just fine. They had actually burrowed down into the snow and had no desire to go into the barn."

Al and Shirley have also found it pays to breed for late season lambing. "It's so much easier and healthier if they lamb out of doors when the snow has melted."

The only other Knoblach livestock are 12 Seminal cattle, which help the sheep with grazing.

Produce raised at Shepherd's Farm includes apples, peaches, bushels of tomatoes, peppers and rhubarb. Warm rhubarb served over ice cream is a treat from the past.

"Busy as we are, I still have other ideas," Shirley admits. "I would like to make canned lamb stews or soups to sell as take-home items. And, I also want to add lamb kebabs to my menu."

While Shirley would enjoy staying open all year and the coziness of the restaurant with its hardwood floors, cathedral ceiling, and country decor would be a perfect setting for holiday parties, business dies off after the outdoor activity season.

"We are in a camping, hiking, boating, bicycling area," Shirley admits. "The season is short but when it's over, it's over. A pumpkin festival in Confluence and a Pennsylvania Dutch autumn event in nearby Springs, seems to bring everything to an end."

Consequently, the Knoblachs open in late April and close after the fall festivities of the nearby area.

"It's hard work, but we're having fun," Shirley says. "And, we have a better market for our lambs than we would have dared to dream of."

Shepherd's Farm is located on the road between Confluence and Somerset.

ANSWER — Kelly Trumbower, Hartsville, wanted a recipe for shoo-fly pie that is wet bottom. She also wanted a recipe for Kentucky Derby pie. Thanks to Elizabeth Seibert, Fredericksburg; Gloria Sweigart, Manheim, and others for sending recipes.

Never-Fail Shoo-Fly Pie

Mix together:
1 cup flour
¾ cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon shortening

Reserve one half cup of the crumbs for top of pie. In a separate bowl, mix together:
1 large egg, lightly beaten
1 cup molasses
¾ cup hot water
1 teaspoon baking soda

Stir in dry ingredients, mixing lightly with fork, it will be lumpy.

Pour into prepared 9-inch pie shell. Sprinkle the half cup crumbs on top, starting at edge and working into middle. Bake on bottom rack of preheated oven. Bake at 400 degrees for 20 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees for 25 minutes or until set.

Never-Fail Pie Crust

3 cups flour
1¼ cup shortening
1 teaspoon salt

Mix with hands until crumbly. In a small bowl, beat together:
1 large egg
⅓ cup ice water
2 tablespoons vinegar

Pour into dry ingredients and mix with fork to form a large ball. It will seem wet. Let set 15 to 20 minutes before rolling out to fit 9-inch pie pans.

Makes four 9-inch pie shells or 2 double crust pies. These freeze well.

2 cloves garlic minced

Cook until soft. Add:
1 cup catsup
3 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
2 teaspoons dry mustard
¼ cup vinegar
¼ cup brown sugar
2 teaspoons chili powder
½ teaspoon tabasco sauce

Simmer 15 minutes. Make your pork barbecue or ham barbecue. Put on bun. Grill 5-6 inches from heat. Baste with some sauce. Serve on toasted bun. Make cole slaw.
2 cups thinly shredded cabbage
¼ cup grated carrots
¼ cup thinly sliced red onion
2 teaspoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons mayonnaise

Top bun with cole slaw and serve with barbecue sauce.

ANSWER — Jenny Palovitch of Lancaster County wanted to purchase a wrought iron bench that wraps around a tree. Garden Centers such as Esbenshade's Greenhouse in Lititz sell them.

ANSWER — Margaret Diamond, Kunkletown, wanted information on hair embroidery, instructions on the craft, items owned with a history, or items for sale. Thanks to Marcia Richards, Pitman, N.J., who writes that she collects hair pictures and information concerning it. She recommends the book, "Make Things Grandma Made," by Marjorie Stapleton. Prints or etchings were copied in thin black silk, often taken from unravelled crepe, on a background of ivory satin. Hair was sewn in to create highlights. Stitched hair shimmers in the light. To make hair embroidery, hair should be sterilized. Use several long hairs, a very fine needle, thin black sewing silk, a scrap of white, cream or ivory silk or satin (work is often small and framed in round or oval shapes), an embroidery frame, some watercolors, a pin and some sticky tape, a small print to copy.

For more information, visit Leila's Hair Museum, 815 W. 23rd St., Independence, MO 64055. 816-252-HAIR.

According to "The Victoriana Collector's Handbook," by Charles Platten Woodhouse, several forms of hairwork was practiced by Victorian women. Pictures in human hair was the most popular. Both blond and dark hair were used, but red hair rarely appears in pictures. The art consisted of using separate hairs to form a fine line as delicate as a cobweb to create miniature scenes, mounted in maplewood frames.

Another book, "Victoriana," by Jean Latham, said that hairwork may be mistaken for penwork. The hair of relatives and friends was woven into a landscape or portrait with the same mournful intention as the mourning rings of the same period. Eighteenth-century ladies were adept at these sad momentoes, which usually show a sorrowing relative standing by a large urn or mausoleum.

These fragile and rare pictures are hard to find because they are mostly preserved by old families still living in an ancestral home and fondly treasured.

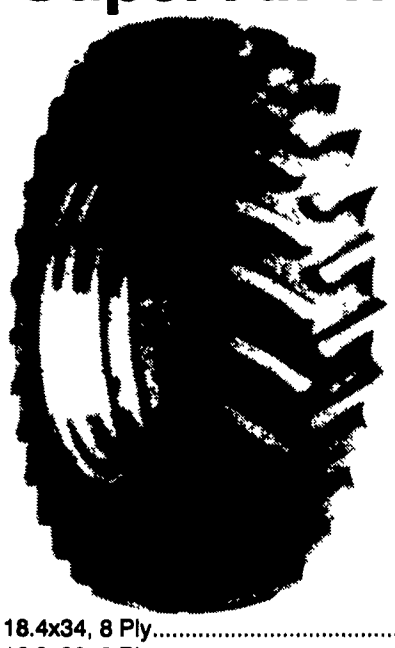
Super All Traction 23°



R-1

- New top-of-line bias-ply tractor rear, featuring our long bar/long bar design for tread stability, and heavy bar bracing to extend tread life.
- Long wearing and smooth riding, due to the more uniform, flatter contour of the long bar/long bar design.
- Proven 23° bar angle for traction and open center for self-cleaning.
- Bead and rim protector shields the rim to help keep stubble and soil from getting between the bead and rim flange.

BASIC RESEARCH IN REPRODUCTIVE PHYSIOLOGY WILL HELP IMPROVE FERTILITY OF BROILER BREEDER MALES

H. S. Siegel
Professor Of
Poultry Science

For many years, the semen quality of male chickens and turkeys was evaluated on the basis of the number of sperm cells in a certain volume of semen, the motility or movement of the cells, the number of malformed cells, or the metabolic activity of the cells. Although these measurements informed researchers and breeding companies about the quality of the semen outside the body of individual males, or groups of males, they did not give much information about the semen where the action is, that is, at the point of fertilization of the egg.

When the female is inseminated, either naturally or artificially, the sperm cells are first stored in sperm storage tubules that are located at the uterus-vagina junction of the oviduct. The sperm cells are released from these sperm storage tubules at various times for a week or more after insemination. Fertilization takes place in the uppermost section of the oviduct, called the infundibulum, immediately after the yolk, or ovum, is shed from the ovary, and before any albumen is secreted to surround it. So, in order to fertilize the egg, the sperm cells must travel the length of the oviduct and attach themselves to the membrane surrounding the yolk (called the perivitelline membrane). Keep in mind that the yolk, or ovum, is a single large cell with a nucleus (located in the germinal disc) and a huge amount of fat and protein to nourish the developing embryo during incubation.

Research by Wishart (1987), who used fluorescent dyes to identify the sperm cells, showed that a certain number of sperm cells must attach to the yolk membrane to assure fertilization. The average number has been placed at 2.0 to 2.5 cells on the first day of insemination according to Wishart (1989), and will reach 1,000 cells or more by the second day after insemination according to Alexander and her coworkers at Penn State (1993). Further work by Bromwell and associates (1992) at the University of Georgia suggests that not only is binding of the sperm cells to the membrane necessary but penetration of the membrane must also occur. These researchers developed a method to count the number of penetration holes produced by the sperm cells in the area covering the germinal disc.

This basic research is helping researchers and poultry breeders solve two important questions about reproduction in domestic fowl.

• 1. Effects of frozen storage of semen. Although artificial insemination of fresh semen has been highly successful in domestic chickens and turkeys, in contrast to mammalian semen, the use of frozen then thawed semen of birds has been notably unsuccessful. Penn State scientists have found that the number of previously frozen sperm cells that attach to the yolk membrane is severely reduced in frozen compared to fresh semen, even though the cells appeared normal by such criteria as concentration and motility. They hypothesize that the reason for the poor fertility of frozen semen is that many of the sperm cells fail to enter the sperm storage tubules or have reduced ability to leave the tubules and transverse the length of the oviduct to attach to the yolk membrane.

• 2. Effect of high environmental temperature. The second important question that is being investigated is how elevated temperature during the summer months reduces fertility in broiler breeder flocks. It has been estimated (Keirs, 1982) that fertility declines by an average of 15 percent in July, August and September, resulting in a potential reduction of 279 million broiler chicks nationwide. McDaniel and his associates at the University of Georgia (1995) showed that although semen volume, sperm concentrations and the percentage of dead sperm were unaffected by environmental temperatures, the number of sperm cells that are able to penetrate the yolk membrane is reduced in males exposed to 85-90 degree F for periods as short as 12 hours. It is not unusual for afternoon temperatures to reach such levels in the summer in broiler producing areas.

Thus, research into the basic mechanisms of reproduction may lead to improvements in fertility and increased broiler chick yield. For more about this subject, see the following publications:

Solar-Powered Engergizer Ideal For Grazing

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Gallagher Power Fence, Inc. has introduced a new, self-contained solar powered energizer. It is intended for multiwire portable fencing for controlled grazing or any medium acreage application.

The B-30 energizer, with improved circuitry, reduces the power draw from the battery and insures that the unit will function effectively in northern border states even in the dead of winter.

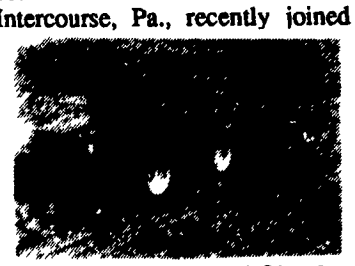
Case Dealer Representatives Look At Tractors

FARGO, N.D.—Two employees from C.B. Hoober & Son of Intercourse, Pa., recently joined nearly 800 other Case IH dealership representatives for a firsthand look at the new Case IH 9300 Series Steiger® four-wheel-drive tractors and the Case Corporation manufacturing facility here.



Chuck Hoober and Charles Hoober from C.B. Hoober & Son of Intercourse, Pa., recently joined nearly 800 other Case IH dealership representatives at the Case Corporation manufacturing plant in Fargo, N.D., for a first-hand look at the new Case IH 9300 Series Steiger® tractors.

Chuck Hoober and Charles Hoober attended the two-day product launch including a tour of the 543,000 square-foot plant and special sessions devoted to new 9300 Series features. The C.B. Hoober & Son attendees also had the opportunity to get hands-on experience operating the six new Steiger models: the 9330 at 235 HP, 9350 at 310 HP, 9370 at 360 HP, 9380 at 400 HP, and the 9330 and 9350 row crop special units with steerable front axles.

"We asked dealers who attended the introduction what their customers would notice first about the 9300 Series," said Kelly Kravig, Case product manager-4WD tractors. "The Steiger name on the grille and decal was the number one answer. Like Case IH, it's a name their cusomers equate with reliable, durable four-wheel-drive tractors." He said that Case IH and Steiger have been associated since 1986 when Case purchased the Fargo-based company.

ABS Announces In Vitro Fertilization

DEFOREST, Wis.—ABS Global, Inc., recently announced that it will offer in vitro fertilization services to the embryo transfer industry through a newly formed business partnership with IVP.

Through this service, ABS and IVP will work together to collect oocytes (eggs) from donors housed either within owner herds or temporarily housed at ABS. Within the ABS laboratories, the oocytes will be matured and fertilized using in vitro techniques, and then either frozen or transferred into ABS supplied recipient females.

Within this partnership, Dr. Lee Matthews, through the company IVP, will provide the service of collecting the oocytes as well as recruiting other veterinarians to do the same. Initially, due to geographical constraints, this service unit will only serve Wisconsin, USA, and the closely surrounding areas. Beef and non-lactating, dairy donor females from outside this area may be included if they are housed at ABS during the process. A management board for this project, led by Dr. Matthews, will make the necessary decisions to rapidly expand this business and eventually satellite into other geographic areas.

Brett Scott will represent ABS in this partnership as manager of the embryo production laboratory. Scott will direct the day-to-day operations at the DeForest location and represent the embryo production team on the management board. Ann Marie Paprocki, senior IVF technician, and Heidi VanBeek, veterinary technician, complete this team. Karen VanBeek, veterinary technician with the livestock area, will coordinate the animal resources with the embryo production.

"This new service offers an alternative to harvesting elite genetics from superior females," said Scott. "Our target niche will be females of value for A.I. contracts, as well as a tool for those breeders striving to improve their herd with larger numbers of offspring from their best cows."

"This process is a good altnerative to super-ovulation," said Matthews. "Not only does it allow the production of embryos from females already pregnant, it also allows more frequent oocyte collections, the use of several different mating sires, and a process that does not utilize hormones or other drugs."

Longer term, ABS hopes to develop this service to a larger geographical market through additional training and the use of satellite laboratories.

Fees set for this service are $35 for IVP collection of donors at ABS and $175 per embryo for quality grade one (1) or two (2) produced. Additional costs would include donor housing fees, recipient fees, and market price for semen.

Bennett Receives Award

SHERIDAN, Wyo. — The Beef Improvement Federation (BIF) honored Paul Bennett with a Continuing Service Award at the convention held here at the Holiday Inn.

Bennett was born in 1961 to James and Barbara Bennett of Knoll Crest Farms of Red House, Va. Bennett's interest in beef cattle was noticed when he was four years old. He started showing heifers when he was six and has maintained all Knoll Crest cattle records since he was 10.

Bennett was graduated from Randolph Henry High School and VPI and SU in 1979 and 1983, respectively. While in college, Bennett was a member of the livestock judging team and was the first recipient of the George Litton Award. He was an active Block and Bridle Club and AGR Fraternity member and officer.

Bennett returned to Knoll Crest Farms, which today has a national reputation of producing performance oriented Polled Hereford, Gelbvieh, and Angus cattle.

Bennett is one of the most outstanding breeders of purebred cattle in America today, producing both bulls and females that have been in demand by both the purebred and commercial cattle industries.

Knoll Crest Farms have placed in excess of 10 bulls of the Polled Hereford, Gelbvieh, and Angus breeds in A.I. studs that have been used extensively throughout the United States and foreign countries. Polled Hereford seedstock cattle have been exported to Australia.

Bennett is a demonstrated leader at the local, state and national levels.

Emu Producers: Prepare For Competitive Global Market

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Clayton Yeutter, former U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, encouraged the emu industry to "develop your own product niche" and to prepare for the "inevitable regulatory challenges" and the emerging opportunities in a more fairly structured global agribusiness marketplace.

Yeutter who has held Cabinet positions under three presidents, keynoted the 5th annual meeting of the American Emu Association. About 1,300 emu ranchers and farmers gathered at Bally's Las Vegas for the three-day convention and exposition.

"GATT (General Agreement on Trade & Tariffs), which focused on unfair trade practices of other nations in agriculture . . . will over the next six years . . . move agriculture to a free and open trade environment on a global basis," he said. "That affects what we do with our farm legislation in the United States. We've got to reduce ag (production) subsidies at about 20 percent a year.

"I believe this is a good thing, probably to your advantage. To the degree that production subsidies hold the prices for grains, you will benefit from taking out that artificial stimulant. The fewer distortions that are there in the way of government export subsidies programs around the world, the better off we are all going to be, particularly because the Europeans spend a lot more money on meats than we do."

Yeutter, who holds a PH.D. in agricultural economics, is "of counsel" to a major law firm in Washington, D.C. He said Congress now "has to formulate a 1995 Farm Bill that will fit into that overall global picture, because we are obligated by the (GATT) agreement to do that.

"Frankly, I think we may have one more farm bill after this, and early in the next century we will see government essentially out of agriculture in the United States," he said. "Even though governments may be out of the business of artificially stimulating prices, the marketplace may bring a price stimulus in itself."

Yeutter, who recently chaired a session on "Regional Accords and a New World Order" at the World Meat Congress in Denver, was instrumental in steering the 1990 Farm Bill through Congress, moving U.S. agriculture toward a more market-oriented policy structure. He served as U.S. trade representative and helped the 1988 Trade Bill through Congress while launching the 100-nation Uruguay round of GATT negotiations which led to the historic North American Free Trade Agreement.

Yeutter predicted emu products "will have a very successful niche in the food markets of the United States and the world. NAFTA should help you in Mexico and Canada," to deliver a combined (with U.S.) population of 400 million persons. "You should consider that your domestic marketplace.

"Health food is the niche you are selling," with the heart-helathy, low fat red meat, he said. "Those types of products are doing very, very well, and are just as big outside the United States. Your industry may have more than one niche: meat, oil, hides (leather), feathers and others not yet discovered.

"Get the necessary research results to back-up what you are saying about your products in terms of healthcare. Support it with data and the necessary research so you can support your case at the local, state, national and . . . to meet the standards on a global basis."

He also noted that the general consensus is that the current world population of 5.5 billion people will be closer to 10 billion by the year 2050, and most persons will live longer. "Somebody is going to have to produce an awful lot of food to take care of the nutritional needs of the world."

"Regulatory challenges will be a major issue for the next 10 to 30 years," Yeutter said. "That's regrettable, but a fact of life today. We have so many organizations out there that are so well financed today that they will file lawsuits to challenge what you are doing. Recognize the challenge; minimize the risk."

Yeutter said the emu industry "clearly has one of advantage" in producing a natural product without using growth hormones. "Take advantage of that from a marketing standpoint. Get the emotionalism and sensationalism out of this business and focus on what is rational and objective," he said.

Yeutters praised "the enthusiasm and energy of this crowd. The leadership you have been able to generate over a short period of time is remarkable." The industry is less than 10 years old.

Emu raising is one of the fastest growing, most dynamic agribusinesses in the nation, with a remarkable interest being shown internationally, according to the Dallas-based, nonprofit trade organization which has 6,000 members.

In less than six years, this once-fledgling industry has grown to more than 10,000 families raising an estimated 1.2 million to 1.5 million emus in 48 states, based on a 1994 census. The AEA has 33 state chapters; an increasing number of national and regional cooperatives, and numerous research studies building a scientific knowledge base on emus and their products.

The convention continues through Saturday at 4 p.m. with the exhibit area open to the public free of charge on Saturday afternoon. Everything from cooperatives, incubators, ranches, jewelry and artwork, to ratite publications, software, fencing, feeds and fashions — including leather swim wear, jackets and full-length western duster are featured.

Concern About Lepto Reported To AVMA

PITTSBURGH — A resurgence of concern about a major reproductive disease in cattle has been reported just as one of the few antibiotics that has been effective in treating it has been withdrawn from the market in the U.S., according to a presentation at the 132nd annual meeting of the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA) in the David L. Lawrence Convention Center.

Leptospirosis, caused by a bacterial infection that affects all mammals, was first recognized nearly 100 years ago and thought to have peaked a generation ago, reported Carole A. Bolin, D.V.M., Ph.D., research leader at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Animal Disease Center in Ames, Iowa.

"Now we're seeing a resurgence of interest, partly because vaccines do not provide protection against common types of the disease, and it is often difficult to diagnose and treat," Bolin said. Tests at the slaughterhouse show that up to 10-15 percent of U.S. cattle are infected, according to Bolin.

Leptospirosis is so named because it is caused by infection with the bacterium Leptospira interrogans, of which approximately 200 different serovars have been identified. In cattle, the most common serovar is hardjo. "Vaccines for hardjo are not providing optimum protection of cattle. Improvement in their efficacy is necessary," Bolin told the convention audience.

In addition, the antibiotic that has provided the most effective treatment for leptospirosis, dihydrostreptomycin, has been withdrawn from the market in the U.S. accordin to Bolin.

Leptospirosis is an important cause of bovine abortions, stillbirths, and birth of weak calves. It also affects swine and dogs and is commonly transmitted from wildlife carriers, including skunks, possums, raccoons, rats, and mice. In its acute form, leptospirosis may cause serious liver and kidney disease that can be fatal to any mammal.

"In herds in which hardjo infection is endemic, the incidence of abortions, stillbirths, and weak calves can be reduced by assuring that heifers are exposed to older cows and, therefore, to hardjo before breeding," she said. "In some herds, however, this may lead to breeding difficulties associated with persistent infection of the reproductive tract. Another disadvantage of this approach is that infected cattle may remain persistently infected and shed hardjo in their urine for long periods of time, serving as a reservoir of infection for other animals and humans."

In other important presentations on food animal veterinary medicine:

• Mary C. Smith, D.V.M., of the College of Veterinary Medicine, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., reported her observations on treatment of sheep and goats in the United Kingdom, where she recently spent 11 months working in a government diagnostic laboratory. Raising sheep is a considerably larger industry in the U.K., with 90,000 sheep farmers and 20 million sheep, compared to 87,000 operations and 8.9 million animals in this country. "Vaccinations are used much more widely in the U.K. to control reproductive diseases, such as toxoplasmosis and chlamydiosis, and they do a tremendous amount of ultrasounding to pregnancy check their ewes," Smith reported.

• Resistance is widespread to drugs used to control parasites that invade cattle, swine, sheep, goats, and horses, reported Roger K. Prichard, D.V.M., of McGill University, Montreal, Quebec, Canada. "To preserve the potency of antiparasitic drugs we need to be able to detect the development of low-level resistance before the activity of the drug is impaired.

Premium List For Fair Exhibits Available At Fair Office

Allentown Fair Premium Lists, which explain exhibit entry procedures for this year's fair running Aug. 29-Sept. 4, are available at the fair office.

Requirements, deadlines, and fees for entry in all departments are listed. Animals, farm, orchard, garden and home products, and flowers, photographs, antiques, arts and crafts are judged and exhibited at the fair.

During this year's fair, the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II will be commemorated by special exhibits inside Agricultural Hall. Home and garden trends from the war period will be displayed, including examples of "victory gardens."

The fair is asking that photographs of local World War II veterans be submitted for a "Salute to Veterans" exhibit. Participants can either mail or drop off one photo of their favorite vet to the fair office from August 1-21 between 9 a.m.-5p.m.

The name or names of the person or persons pictured and, if known, the year and the location of the photo must be labeled on the back of the photo. The entrant's name, address and phone number also must be listed.

In addition to the traditional fair judging categories, the premium list describes seven corporate-sponsored culinary competitions. They are listed as "special contests" under the home products section.

Two of the contests, Land O Lakes Light and No Fat Sour Cream "Quick Bread" and Spam "Best Recipes," are state-level competitions with winning recipes forwarded to national test kitchens. Placing entries at the fair can win up to $100.

The national Land O Lakes winner will receive $500 and a year's supply of products. The Spam national finalist will win a $2,500 shopping spree at the Mall of America in Minneapolis, Minn. plus air fare and two nights' accommodations for two.

New this year, The Pampered Chef, a company which offers an array of kitchen tools through home shows, is sponsoring an "original cookie contest." Contestants are asked to create a cookie to be judged on originality, taste, and appearance. Up to a $100 worth of Pampered Chef products will be awarded to place winners.

The locally-operated Clover Hill Winery and Vineyards is back for its second year with a "Cooking With Wine" contest. Entrants may prepare an appetizer, entree or dessert. Place winners will receive gift baskets from Clover Hill.

The Softasilk "Championship Cake Award" winner will take home $100 from the fair competition. And, for "chocoholics," Hershey returns with its "Greatest Cocoa Cake Contest" and its youth "Greatest Cocoa Cookies, Brownies and Bars Contest" for 8 to 18 year olds.

First place winners go on to the Pennsylvania Farm Show in January where they vie to win a weekend at a Hershey resort.

Unlike the other items in Ag Hall that are judged without spectators before the fair opens, the special contests judging is hosted by radio station WLEV with the public invited to watch. Livestock judging events are also open to spectators.

Premium Lists can be picked up at the fair office behind the Ritz Barbecue on the fair grounds weekdays between 9 a.m.-5 p.m. They are also available at the fair ticket office Saturdays from 10 a.m-2 p.m. For more information, call (610) 433-7542.

'Year of the Dairy Cow' At Montgomery County, Md. Fair

Increased premiums, butter sculpting, milking demonstrations, and educational exhibits highlighting the dairy industry will be some of the many activities planned for the 1995 Montgomery County Agricultural Fair when the Year of the Dairy Cow is celebrated.

The annual Gaithersburg, Md. event, Aug. 18-26, which draws more than 400,000 spectators, recognizes an animal species each year as the Animal of the Year.

"There are so many dairy-related activities and educational programs that we are able to offer to our visitors," said Fair President Robert Pack. "We hope that the dairy exhibitors will also see this year's fair as a special opportunity to compete with other top-notch breeders. The increase in the premiums offered for our dairy shows will hopefully draw those who don't normally exhibit at our fair."

Activities to be included at the 1995 fair are a butter sculptor, a milking parlor, calf judging, and milking contests.

A one-ton replica of a Holstein cow will greet fair visitors at the Perry Parkway entrance to the fair, courtesy of Turkey Hill Dairy of Conestoga, Pa., while a cluster of cows grazing atop a platform will highlight the fair's circle display at Chestnut Street.

"The fair's advertising campaign is 'Come to the Fair and Milk It For All It's Worth'," Pack said. "The fair wants people to come to our event and take in all of the activities, many of which are free, and just literally have a great time. It's a great event to come to if families are looking for good wholesome entertainment all the way through."

Complete rules and regulations for exhibiting at the Montgomery County Agricultural Fair can be obtained by calling the fair office at (301) 926-3100.

Ag Equipment To Be Showcased Aug. 1

ELKTON, Md. — Maryland's premier agricultural equipment demonstration is scheduled for Tuesday, August 1, in Cecil County.

Ag Showcase, in its 15th year, has become a popular part of the Cecil County Fair, drawing more than 300 farmers from Maryland, Delaware, and Pennsylvania.

No matter what crops or livestock you produce, there will be equipment here for you.

This year's program at the Fair Hill Fair Grounds on MD Route 273 will feature the latest in hay, conservation tillage, TMR mixing, and manure handling equipment.

Come prepared for a hands-on event as equipment will be demonstrated, not just exhibited. Dealer and company representatives will be on hand to answer your questions as you put their equipment through the test.

Refreshments, provided by Central Maryland Farm Credit, Elkton office, will be available at 9:30 a.m. Along with morning equipment demonstrations, Gary Cottman, product representative with John Deere, will give a brief program on global positioning systems.

Also, Dr. Wesley Musser, extension economist with the University of Maryland, will talk about his research to assist farmers in selecting the proper size farm equipment for their farms.

Equipment demonstrations start in on 20 acres of orchard grass hay with the newest mowing, raking, tedding, and chopping equipment. Prior to lunch, extension personnel will discuss the cost and effectiveness of single strand electric fencing to prevent deer damage to crops. Lunch will be available for a charge, served by the county Farm Bureau women.

After lunch, activities continue with box and slurry type manure spreader demonstrations including how to calibrate these for precision application. Then it'll be hay baling time with the latest balers, baggers, and wrappers. TMR mixer wagons will also be demonstrated. Field equipment activities wind down with a conservaton tillage equipment demonstration. Soil conservation staff will be on hand to measure residue cover after each machine.

Antique equipment from area collectors will be displayed all day. For the first time ever, Ag Showcase activities spill over onto the fairgrounds, with a compact tractor demonstration at 6:30 p.m. Spectators will get to see and operate compact tractors and every conceivable attachment available.

Farmers-Businessmen Picnic July 26

FLEMINGTON, N.J. — The Hunterdon County Board of Agriculture is holding its annual "Farmers - Businessmen's Picnic on Wednesday, July 26, at the Old Dogwood Hill Farm, Milford, N.J.

Wagon tours of the farm will start at 4:30 p.m. until 5:45 p.m. A riding demonstration will take place at 6 p.m., with a picnic supper at 6:30 p.m.

Old Dogwood Hill Farm, Inc. is owned and operated by Paul and Edith Kozak. Since 1980, theirs has been a "homebred" Thoroughbred horse breeding and training farm. They have four Thoroughbred stallions and two stallions used as "teasers." There are 28 broodmares, from whom are produced the sales inventory of the future.

The vast majority of the land is devoted to pasture. Their staff offers a full range of training options to owners, from teaching a foal its first lesson to breaking the 2- to 3-year-old. They offer seminars to the public on breeding and pregnancy care, a training regime from foal to finish, in-hand clinic, do's and don'ts of the show ring, and numerous other programs.

The meal will be an old-fashioned full-course picnic supper by Maddalena's Cheesecake Co. Inc. There will be barbecued chicken sausage and peppers, potato salad, coleslaw, corn on the cob, fresh fruit, watermelon, cheesecake, ice cream, coffee, tea, and milk.

After supper, George Ball Jr., president, chairman, and CEO of the W. Atlee Burpee Co. will be guest speaker. His speech will be "the history of the last 150 years of gardening and farming through the eyes of the Burpee Company.

There will be a drawing for door prizes after the talk.

All tickets are $15 per person. Deadline for purchase is July 20. Call extensions service, (908) 788-1339, for more information.

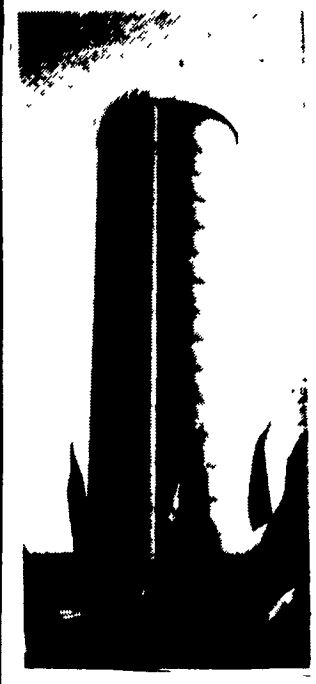
THINK CONCRETE WHEN PLANNING YOUR FEED STORAGE!!



"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

The major costs on dairy and livestock farms are related to FEED: production...harvesting...storage...purchases...delivery to animals. Significant savings in time and money are possible when you store and deliver your feed from a poured concrete silo.

"As margins narrow, dairymen need to invest in efficiency: This can have as great an influence on Profit as milk price changes."

Protect your valuable feeds from rain, sleet, snow, mud, ice, wind and the sun's heat. Reduce the stress. INCREASE THE EFFICIENCY OF YOUR FEEDS, LABOR, AND LIVESTOCK!

At Sollenberger Silos Corp. we know a lot about feed storage and handling; we've been in the business since 1908. If your plans call for new feed storage, give us a call...We'd like to contribute to your success!!

NO USED SILOS!

NO PRE-OWNED SILOS!

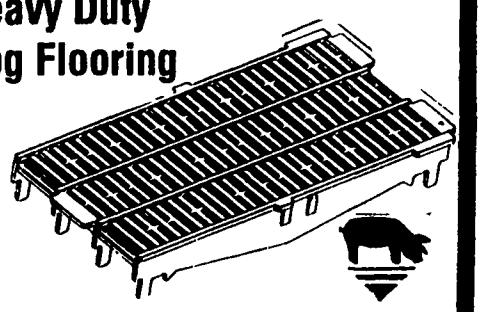
REPLACING HOG FLOORING? CONSIDERING NEW CONSTRUCTION? ☑ CHECK OUT Polygrate™
Heavy Duty Hog Flooring



Time Tested and Proven
This style of POLYGRATE was first introduced in 1981. Over the years Farrex has continued to refine this product. POLYGRATE is one of only a few "World Class" floors that has stood this test of time.
Outstanding Traction
POLYGRATE'S unique "high-low" finger design provides outstanding traction for pigs of all sizes, while enhancing safety and comfort.
◆ POLYGRATE'S rounded corners minimize injuries. The edges are beveled providing a smoother, safer surface that promotes comfort, too.

What Does This All Add Up To?
◆ More piglets survive until weaning
◆ Less splay/spraddle leg problems
◆ Heavier piglets at weaning
◆ Better conditioned sows at weaning

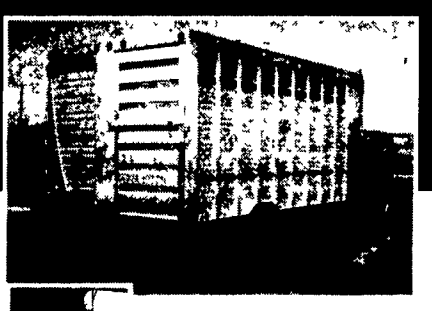
Agriculture Moves on EBY Bodies



M.H. Eby custom-builds aluminum truck bodies for the agri-transportation market. Nobody offers more sizes and options in:

- LIVESTOCK BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of heights and widths.
- GRAIN BODIES - Lengths to 24'; landscape and general purpose dumps to 12'.
- FLATBED BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of 5 widths.

For greater payload capacity, Eby's aluminum design is equal in strength to steel and up to 40% lighter. Our corrosion-resistant components never need painting. That means minimum maintenance, improved appearance and higher resale value.

Eby products have superior standard features. And we offer custom options for virtually any application. Agriculture is your business- building bodies to haul it is ours.

Let EBY custom build one for you.

Model Allows For Cost Estimation Of Feeding Programs

ABSTRACT

Through the use of a model factors influencing the cost of a commodity feeding program can be evaluated and appropriate costs developed for dairy producers In this article, four case studies are used to demonstrate the sensitivity of the model and how changes in some of the factors influence whether benefits of a particular feeding management decision were greater than costs of implementation

By F.E. STANDAERT, D.A. DEETZ, R.W. PALMER AND A.F. KERTZ

Many dairy producers have considered the addition of a commodity program to their current dairy management strategy A commodity purchase and feeding program which includes on-farm storage and mixing of feed ingredients may be attractive for several reasons

- Expected reduction in feed costs
- Convenient application to a total mixed ration
- Ability to customize ration according to nutritional specifications desired or needed for the individual dairy operation
- Ability to take advantage of 'opportunity ingredients and
- Anticipated greater influence on quality of finished dairy rations

One goal to be achieved by this type of management decision is enhanced profitability of milk production Cost and benefit analyses can guide dairy operators in evaluating the economic results of investment and management decisions

Projected benefits are easily estimated by the additional income resulting from a management decision In the examples later in this article the benefit will be measured as the value of milk production gained (or lost) as a result of these decisions These examples and the bulk of this paper are from a similar publication

Obtaining a realistic estimation of total costs associated with a management decision is a more difficult task Such a task is complicated by the need to quantitate costs related to animal housing, feed storage and delivery systems labor supply, financial capacity and management goals and abilities each of these must be considered as variables for the operation This article describes an analysis that herd managers and nutritionists may use to assess costs and benefits related to changes in a feeding program Additionally it applies these cost and income principles to several case studies as examples A copy of the model can be obtained by calling (800) 227-8941

Cost evaluation

Initial investment cost and an interest charge to the investment are the most obvious costs of changing to a commodity feeding program A Cost Analysis Worksheet contains some costs of on-farm commodity milling and mixing which are less obvious and more difficult to estimate Some of these costs often are not considered However they must be incorporated into an analysis to reflect true dairy farm profit

Size estimate of the enterprise

Herd size will have a major impact on the total volume of feedstuffs to be handled Herd size also will determine the type and size of facilities that will be required to store and handle commodities A recent study on commodity feeding programs conducted at Washington State University concluded that economic benefit could be realized by dairy operations with as few as 100 to 130 milking cows Other reports have suggested that more than 100 to 150 cows up to a minimum of 400 to 500 cows are necessary for profitable adoption of a commodity feeding program A simple number cannot be suggested for a minimum herd size This fact underscores the importance of this analysis for individual dairy operations

The amount of grain mix that will be fed to each cow and the ingredient cost of the feed mix are important to this analysis These values represent the amount and cost of farm mixed commodities that will replace feed products purchased from a feed manufacturer This analysis assumes that nutritional composition of the commodity based ration is consistent and similar to the manufactured feed which it replaces With a commodity ingredient program operators should consider nutritional consistency of ingredients the number of ingredients needed and ingredient availability Producers currently purchasing a protein concentrate to feed 10 lb per cow per day with an inventory of high-moisture corn will need to select protein mineral and vitamin sources to replace purchased concentrates Dairy operators currently purchasing complete dairy feeds will need to provide energy protein minerals and vitamins from commodity feedstuffs Grain mix feeding rate feed mix ingredient cost and herd size determine the volume of commodities that will be purchased stored and mixed on the farm The amount fed and price for wet commodity feeds needs to be adjusted for different moisture content (e g wet brewers grain) This analysis uses pounds and prices in dollars per ton (1 ton = 2,000 lb) adjusted to 90% dry matter

Capital cost estimate

Interest costs on capital investment and inventory as well as depreciation costs are considered in the next section For some operators, the interest rate will be the rate that is charged by their lender for use of capital If capital investment in assets is paid with cash, this figure should be the rate of return that the capital would earn in another investment

Most commodity feeders report that at least 40% of their commodity ingredient purchases are carried on inventory for greater than one month following full payment The analysis includes an interest charge for the feed ingredient inventory The interest charge is calculated on 40% of annual inventory value (herd size is added for maintenance This labor cost estimate is conservative and is probably not sufficient to cover labor costs for feeding large herds

A commodity ingredient enterprise will require the time and constant attention of a manager in order to be profitable Although this manager may be the dairy farm operator, some value must be placed on these efforts Much time will be spent on the telephone with commodity brokers to survey prices and purchase feedstuffs Additional management duties may include communicating with nutritionists and feed laboratories supervising delivery and unloading of ingredients and training and scheduling of employees This analysis estimates that a minimum of two hours per week will be devoted to this task The management time has been valued at $20 per hour

x feeding rate x cost of mix x 365 days per year) This analysis does not address cash flow considerations of purchasing and storing commodity ingredients

Investment in facilities and equipment must accommodate storage of the commodities include a stationary or mobile mixing unit allow for efficient handling and loading of ingredients from storage to the mixing unit and include a reliable method for weighing commodity ingredients

Required estimates for the analysis are the actual cost of assets and the expected useful working life or depreciation horizon of the asset

Complete discussion of planning and sizing of commodity storage and handling facilities is beyond the scope of this analysis Planning should consider the herd size feeding rate number of feeding and mixing times per day required number of ingredients, density of ingredients storage life of ingredients and minimum purchase and delivery amount Information from Table 1 may be helpful in estimating physical storage requirements for commodity facilities

Associated costs

Maintenance and repair costs for capital items are estimated at 2% of the initial capital investment in this analysis As an example annual repair costs to maintain a $20,000 mixing unit would amount to $400 per year This estimate may not be adequate for aged equipment or equipment that receives heavy use

Insurance coverage for additional buildings and equipment as well as increases in real estate taxes resulting from capital investment in commodity facilities are estimated to be 0 5% of the initial investment cost Local considerations will dictate if this estimate is accurate Fuel costs for loading mixing and feeding commodity ingredients are estimated according to fuel cost and the amount of feed to be mixed and fed daily Our analysis assumes that a tractor is used 0 1 hour per ton for loading duties and 0 15 hour per ton for grinding and feeding duties (total 0 25 hour per ton) Tractor fuel consumption has been estimated at 2 3 gal per hour Situations where electrical power is used for ingredient transport loading or mixing require adjustment to this estimate

Cost of labor assigned to the duties of mixing and delivering feed are difficult to target One method of estimating this value is to determine the cost for hiring temporary help to perform these duties when the current workers are unable to complete the work This method helps operations that rely on family labor to assess a labor cost estimate This analysis allows for approximately 0 25 hour of labor per ton for mixing and delivering feed An additional five hours per month is added for maintenance This labor cost estimate is conservative and is probably not sufficient to cover labor costs for feeding large herds

Nutritional variation

The services of a nutritionist and expense of laboratory ingredient analysis will be necessary to assure maintenance of nutritional balance palatability and consistency of the commodity-based feeding program (These services are normally included by feed manufacturers with purchased feed used to balance the commodity-based program) Source of nutrition expertise and cost will vary Nutrition advisors may provide feeding management information primary responsibility for the feeding program and market information regarding specific ingredients This analysis requires input of a monthly cost for these services If a private consultant is utilized cost may be a flat minimum for smaller herds a flat maximum for larger herds based on a monthly cost per cow per month and may also require purchase of a mineral mix Laboratory analyses of ingredients while often overlooked are essential Summaries of laboratory nutrient analyses demonstrate widespread variation in nutrient composition of common feedstuffs The actual nutritional content of the final ration is a calculated guess without accurate nutrient composition information

To illustrate this point nutrient variability of five feedstuffs is shown in Figures 1 through 5 The values are based on our assays over the past year For comparison the 1988 Dairy National Research Council (NRC) nutrient value for each feedstuff was converted to the as-fed dry matter content and noted on each figure

The protein content from 27 849 assays (Figure 1) of dehulled soybean meal ranged from 45 to 51% compared with the NRC value of 49 6% Thus 94 25% of samples assayed had less protein than the book value The distribution of values is rather normal except for fewer at the higher end

Protein content from 3 098 assays (Figure 2) of cottonseed meal ranged from 35 00 to 44 75% compared with the NRC value of 41 5% Thus 68% of samples assayed had less protein than the book value The distribution of values is heavily skewed within the range of 39 5 to 41 5%

From a much smaller data base than the two major protein sources — soybean meal and cottonseed meal — the parent material of cottonseed meal whole cottonseed was found to range from 17 5 to 25 0% protein in 52 assays (Figure 3) Thus 82 7% of samples assayed had less protein than the NRC value of 21 2% There was no normal distribution of values reflecting perhaps both the small number of samples assayed and the large variability in protein content of whole cottonseed

A more recently used animal by product as a protein source for dairy cattle is meat meal Protein content from 1 785 assays (Figure 4) ranged from 45 to 60% compared with the NRC value of 51 5% Thus 61 9% of samples exceeded the protein content of the book value The distribution of values is rather normal with most values between 49 to 55%

Variability in nutrient content of ingredients is not only limited to protein As an example the distribution of phosphorus in meal meal (Figure 5) from 35 assays ranged from 2,5 to 6 0% compared with the NRC value of 4 46% Lack of normal distribution can reflect both the small number of samples assayed and the large variability in phosphorus content of meat meal

Some users of commodities do not regularly assay for nutrient content, but simply use book values They assume that the mix of several or more ingredients will average out the nutrient variability among ingredients and that the book value is a median value resulting in a rather consistent average nutrient content Data in Figures 1 through 4 do not support that assumption as protein values were below book values for 62 to 94% of the assays done on individual ingredients

Ingredient shrink, spoilage

Shrink and spoilage values account for feed ingredients that will be purchased and delivered to the farm, but will not be fed to cows Losses can result from spoilage storage and handling or from grinding and mixing These losses are often neglected or underestimated Studies with wet commodities (brewers or distillers grains) indicate that losses mostly due to seepage and spoilage, can be as high as 20 to 25% Shrink and spoilage losses for dry ingredients often range from 1 to 10% Climate, type of storage structure and method of handling and mixing can have a great impact on shrink and spoilage Shrink and spoilage estimates are provided (Table 2) for various ingredients

Payment terms

Credit and payment terms may differ between feed manufacturers and commodity ingredient brokers These factors must be considered in the analysis Some businesses are not eager to extend credit for ingredient purchases and will expect full payment in a much shorter time This analysis assumes that payment for monthly commodity ingredient purchases will be provided 20 days sooner than terms of payment offered by feed manufacturers If a dairy producer is able to provide cash for this sum, the value of payment terms can be ignored

If payment terms are desired an annual percentage rate for payment terms should be entered for this portion of the analysis

Some dairies may have special costs that are not included on this worksheet These should be included as other expenses in this analysis

All costs can be totalled on a per-month or per-ton basis The actual cost per ton of mixed commodity feed represents a total of all per ton costs from the analysis This value may be compared with the cost of manufactured feed

Income benefits

Changes to income and income over feed costs can be estimated A current milk price and projected changes in milk production resulting from changes to the feeding program need to be provided This portion could be modified to estimate a breakeven production level that would be required at current milk prices to cover added costs of the commodity enterprise This feature is not demonstrated in this analysis

This analysis estimates the total costs of a commodity ingredient enterprise Total costs for the enterprise should be balanced with projected income results to estimate profitability of the management decision The chief objective for most feeding management decisions will be to improve income over feed costs

Case studies

The following case studies portray a variety of situations The diversity indicated by these case studies emphasizes the necessity of individualized analysis for each dairy operation Reliability of the analysis depends on accuracy of the inputs The same size herds were used in all case studies to make interpretations size neutral

Case Study A. This producer milks 150 cows and currently feeds 24 lb per day (90% dry matter equivalent) of a complete feed (14% crude protein) The price of the complete feed is $175 per ton The ingredient cost for a feed mix of comparable nutritional value is $145 per ton The interest rate on inventory in all case studies will be 10% compounded monthly With herd size ling rate information our analysis interest charge on inventory at ap, ximately $26 46 per month This analysis is based on producer observations that indicate 40% of commodity ingredient purchases are carried on inventory for greater than one month following full payment The following capital investment items will be needed

- A three-bay pole construction storage building $28 000
- A mixer wagon with feed weighing capability $20 000
- A used loader $28 000 and
- A dry roller to process whole grains $15 000

No additional cost will be assigned to a tractor that will be used to power the mixing wagon A tractor is already owned and used for other farm duties

This analysis uses the estimated useful life of these capital assets to assign a monthly expense for ownership and use of these items Based on monthly feed tonnage projections, a per-ton expense is determined

Annual repair costs for buildings and equipment are estimated at approximately 2% of the capital investment Expense for additional insurance and taxes is approximately 0 5% of capital investment for our case studies Repair costs and insurance expenses are $1,820 and $455 per year respectively Fuel cost for this analysis is $1/gal

A wage of $6 per hour was paid to workers who operated the feeding equipment

Ten hours of the manager's time per month will be delegated to manage this enterprise at $20 per hour To be certain of the nutritional adequacy and consistency of his mixed feeds, the manager will invest $40 per month for commodity ingredient analyses and will pay $200 per month for the services of a nutrition advisor

Wet brewers grain will be used as a major component of the grain ration Because of the inclusion of wet brewers grain in the new grain ration shrink and spoilage values due to storage and handling are generally greater than for dry ingredients Shrink and spoilage losses for the new grain ration will be relatively high (7%) and amount to a total value of $10 15 per ton

Payment upon delivery must be provided for the feed ingredients used in the new grain ration Credit terms allow him 20 days to provide payment for manufactured feeds A value of 97 cents per ton will be assigned for the difference in payment terms In our case studies an annual rate of 12% (compounded monthly) is applied in estimating value of payment terms

Using this analysis it is estimated that total additional costs for investment storage equipment, labor and management will total $48 12 per ton This value, when added to ingredient costs of $145 00 per ton, indicates that actual cost of mixed feed is approximately $193 12 per ton

Milk income is $12 50/cwt and manufactured complete feed can be purchased for $175 00 per ton It is projected that average herd production will not change as a result of initiating a commodity purchase and storage enterprise With these prevailing conditions daily income over feed cost will decrease by 22 cents per cow per day, or about $992 per month for this herd

Case Study B. This operation is similar in size to Case Study A Similar buildings and equipment would be needed to begin a commodity-based feeding program By using lower cost ingredients it is estimated that ingredient costs will be $15 less per ton of mixed feed used in Case Study A Furthermore it was decided not to incorporate wet brewers grain into storage and feeding program and shrink and spoilage losses can be limited to 2% It is estimated that average daily milk production will be maintained even though lower cost commodity ingredients will be used

At $130 per ton ingredient cost is almost $45 per ton less than the price for a ton of manufactured feed If milk production is maintained an increase in income over feed cost will be realized of slightly greater than $250 per month for the herd However considering the additional costs a decrease in milk production of only lb per cow per day would reduce income over feed costs for the herd by nearly $370 per month These results compared with Case Study A reflect the sensitivity of the model to lower ingredient costs removal of wet brewers grains and reduced shrink and spoilage losses

Case Study C. This 150-cow herd feeds high moisture corn and 10 lb of protein concentrate in a total mixed ration All equipment (mixer wagon with scales tractor and loader) necessary for a commodity enterprise is owned

An increase in machinery usage required for loading and mixing with a commodity feeding program is anticipated An additional cost of $5 000 over the useful life of these assets will be assessed to compensate for additional use Since high-moisture corn is used and rolled when ensiled a dry-roller will not be required to process dry grain A storage area is required for only the protein concentrate portion of the dairy ration For an estimated $12,000, a very inexpensive uncovered storage area can be constructed for two or three ingredients next to the horizontal bunker silo

Purchasing, handling, storage and feeding of commodity ingredients will be managed with four additional hours per month of the manager's time This time will be valued at the same value that is provided to employees, $6 per hour

A reduced-cost enterprise is desired and therefore, a nutritional consultant is not hired nor nutrient analyses conducted on ingredients By minimizing these costs and not purchasing a manufactured protein concentrate, it is anticipated that income over feed cost will increase even if the herd's production declines by 5 to 10%

Shrink and spoilage of ingredients during storage and handling has been esti

PennAg Names Convention Speakers

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — PennAg Industries Association has named the speakers appearing at its 117th convention, scheduled Sept. 17-19 at the Valley Forge Hilton in Valley Forge.

Speakers at the 117th convention are:

• Jim Morris. A political impressionist/satirist, the rubber-faced Morris has become famous as a living cartoon. He captures all the attitude, optimism, and befuddled essence of our nation's prominent leaders. Said Morris, "I'm no lame duck comedian."

The White House press corps' respect for Jim Morris as an astute political observer has led to repeat performances at political roundtable broadcasts, including CBS Nightwatch and CNN's Crossfire. In addition to HBO, Cinemax and numerous appearances on The Tonight Show, Morris has performed at both the White House and Washington Correspondent's dinners.

• Colonel Chuck Scott. Held hostage by Iranian terrorists for 444 days, Colonel Scott speaks on the lessons he learned by enduring such a nightmare. He has been called the best qualified Middle East specialist in the Army by the Pentagon. He as served as a Middle East consultant for a number of corporations and makes frequent trips to the region for meetings with top government and military leaders.

• Honorable Charles Brosius. Appointed by Governor Ridge as Secretary of Agriculture, Charles Brosius is a well-know and well-respected individual in agriculture. Brosius served as vice chairman of the board of directors of Agway, Inc. and was a member of the board's executive and planning committees. In addition, he served as a director of Telmark, Inc., an ag leasing and financing company, and Curtice Burns Foods Inc., a national food processing and marketing company. Brosius was graduated from Penn State University with a bachelor's degree in dairy science and has been a member of the board of trustees there since 1989.

• H. Louis Moore. An agricultural economics professor at Penn State University, Dr. Moore has traveled extensively in the former Soviet Union and Eastern European countries.

Crop Adviser Program Raises Level Of Professionalism

COLLEGE PARK, Md.— There's a new era of voluntary professionalism brewing among people who provide crop management recommendations to farmers. It's called the Certified Crop Adviser (CCA) Program, and it covers a wide range of professionals.

Included on the list are independent crop consultants, agribusiness retail dealers, agricultural agents for the cooperative extension service, cooperatives, manufacturers and agribusiness trade associations.

The CCA Program is intended to provide standards of certification for individuals who wish to participate. Its goal is to help agriculture meet its environmental stewardship challenge.

State or regional boards administer the CCA Program in coordination with the American Registry of Certified Professionals in Agronomy, Crops and Soils (ARCPACS), a membership service of the American Society of Agronomy, headquartered at Madison, Wis. The society handles similar programs for specialists in agronomy, crop consulting, weed science and other agricultural disciplines.

Maryland and three nearby states are served by the Mid-Atlantic Certified Crop Adviser (MACCA) Board, headquartered at 53 Slama Road, Edgewater, MD 21037-1423, (410) 956-5771. Mark Fuchs is the chairman.

Becoming a Certified Crop Adviser in Maryland, New Jersey, Delaware and Virginia requires passing both a national examination and a Mid-Atlantic regional exam.

Certification of credentials and development of examination questions at the regional level involves inputs from agribusiness, agricultural consultants, land-grant universities, and government agencies.

Four major subject areas are covered in the national CCA exam. They are soils and soil fertility, soil and water management, plant growth and development, and pest management (weeds, insects, and diseases). The Mid-Atlantic regional exam emphasizes nutrient management and integrated pest management.

Applicants for certification must have at least two years of crop advising experience and provide employer references. They also must sign a code of ethics. To remain certified requires participation in at least 20 hours of continuing education each year and a biennial audit by the MACCA board.

The national and regional examinations will be offered on an annual basis. The inaugural exams were offered last August. The next exam is scheduled Feb. 2, 1996.

Cost Estimation

mated at 3% Cash is paid for manufactured feed supplements and will be paid for commodity purchases As a result, no charge is assigned for payment terms in this analysis

If average herd daily milk production

Case Study D. This herd is housed in a tie-stall barn Cows receive 10 lb of purchased concentrate to supplement high-moisture corn grain A manufactured feed concentrate is purchased for $296 per ton Commodity ingredient costs for a similar supplement will be $196 per ton Storage is needed for only the concentrate portion of the dairy ration (10 lb) Storage facility, mixing requirements and the cost for these items are less than for Case Study C A dry-roller to process dry grain will not be required The high-moisture corn was rolled when ensiled Decreased capital investment costs are also reflected in decreased repair, insurance and tax expenses Compared with Case Study C, few other changes are required in this analysis Only eight hours per month will be spent managing the commodity enterprise Herd production is projected to increase 2.0 lb per cow per day as a result of the change in feeding program

For this situation, an increase in daily income over feed cost of 39 cents per cow is estimated At that rate, income over feed cost would increase $1,756.54 per month

Conclusions

The case studies presented in this article address only a few of the possible situations that may exist These examples emphasize that dairy managers and nutritionists must examine actual additional costs of a commodity feeding enterprise True costs of a commodity program (raw ingredient cost plus additional costs) must be balanced with milk production results to determine if benefits of this feeding management decision are greater than costs of implementation Therefore, it is critical that the person using this model input information that is unique and accurate for the particular dairy operation for which the model is being used

Emu Raisers Flock To Las Vegas

DALLAS, Texas — Ambassador Clayton Yeutter, secretary of agriculture in the Bush Administration, will discuss global meat production and consumer demands when he addresses about 2,500 attendees at the American Emu Assn. (AEA) Convention and Exposition at Bally's Las Vegas, July 6-8.

At the opposite end of the speakers' spectrum is Clint Malarchuk, former American Hockey League "Goaltender of the Year," who had a stellar career in the National Hockey League before finding "peace, happiness and a future on a Las Vegas emu ranch."

Also expected to attend are World Champion Bareback Rider Wayne Herman from the pro rodeo circuit and Dallas Maverick Jason Kidd, "NBA Rookie of the Year," both of whom use emu oil to relieve aches, pains and strains.

"Emu raising is one of the fastest growing, most dynamic agribusinesses in the nation, with a remarkable interest being shown internationally," said Bettye L. Odle, president of the 6,000-member, Dallas-based, nonprofit trade organization.

"In less than six years, this once-fledgling industry has grown to more than 10,000 families raising an estimated 1.2 million to 1.5 million emus in 48 states," said Odle of Flower Mound, Texas. (Figures based on AEA 1994 National Census and Growth Study.)

"The AEA has 33 state chapters. There is an increasing number of national and regional cooperatives and numerous research studies are building a scientific knowledge base on emus and their products — meat, oil, leather and feathers."

Emus, classified as "livestock" or "ratites" (flightless birds) in most states, are moving into pastures and pens as ranchers, farmers, suburbanites, retirees and even "backyard breeders" see the environmentally-sensitive birds as a way to revitalize ag operations, particularly small acreage, Odle emphasized.

Emu processing and oil rendering plants have begun operating in Texas, with other commercial processing operations in various stages of start-up in Arkansas, California, Colorado, Florida, Louisiana and Mississippi. Texas accounts for about 30 percent of the U.S. emu raisers and a similar portion of the American emu population.

Nutrition in the commercial era will be addressed by Dr. Larry Roth, Minnesota; Dr. Dennis Sigler, Texas; and Dr. Sheila Scheideler of Nebraska. Total management for the breeder in the commercial market will be addressed by Dr. Rosalina Angel of Missouri.

Genetic enhancement will be discussed by Dr. Mark Rosenfeld of Utah, and hatchability will be the focus of Dr. Francine Bradley, an embryonic pathologist from the University of California. Dr. Wayne Purcell of the Research Institute on Livestock Pricing, will share major marketing case studies for poultry and red meat.

California emu producer Roger Haley will share some startling results from intensive genetic, nutritional and pathological research over a three-year period.

Meanwhile, the exhibit area will feature everything from cooperatives, incubators, ranches, jewelry and artwork, to ratite publications, software, fencing, feeds and fashions — including leather swim wear, jackets and full-length western duster.

Dr. Yeutter, who will keynote the 5th annual meeting on Friday, July 7, recently chaired a session on "Regional Accords and a New World Order" at the World Meat Congress in Denver, the premier international event for the world's meat and livestock industries. In addition to undergraduate and law degrees, Yeutter also earned a Ph.D. in agricultural economics from the University of Nebraska.

He was instrumental in steering the 1990 Farm Bill through Congress, moving U.S. agriculture towards a more market-oriented policy structure. He also served as a U.S. Trade Representative and helped the 1988 Trade Bill through Congress while launching the 100-nation Uruguay round of GATT negotiations which led to the historic U.S.-Canada free trade agreement.

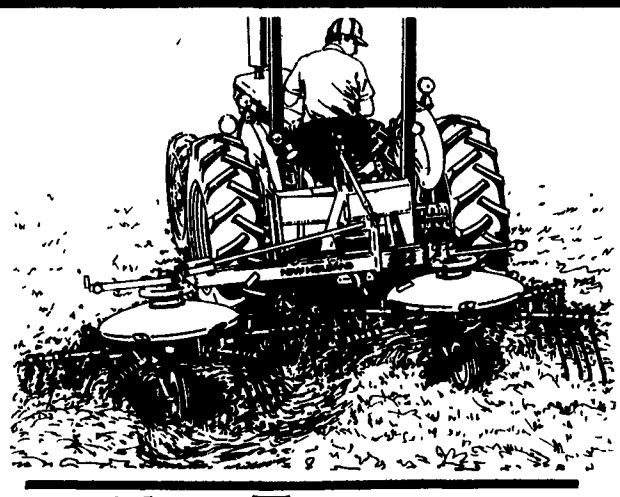
FLEXIBILITY



THE TEDDER THAT RAKES

Now, you can rake and ted with the same machine - the New Holland Model 254 rake tedder. The Model 254 lets you perform a variety of haymaking functions... rake a swath into a windrow, rake two windrows into one, turn windrows, and move crop away from treelines and fences. And, without tools you can convert the Model 254 into a tedder that will fluff up wet, matted-down crop for quick drying.

Stop in today. Let us show you the flexibility of the New Holland Model 254 rake tedder!

NEW HOLLAND

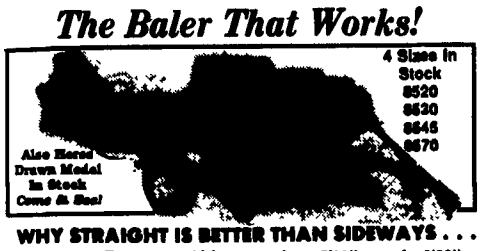
The Baler That Works!



WHY STRAIGHT IS BETTER THAN SIDEWAYS . . .

Reason #1 Transport width ranges from 7'11" to only 8'86" on our 8550 Model. Conventional balers are generally 1-foot wider in transport.

Reason #2 No need to widen our baler out once you're in the field or narrowing when leaving the field. The conventional baler must be narrowed and widened. Reduced time and effort means money

Reason #3 Never a need to pick up bales when opening a field and cropping them on the ground — you can even leave the bale thrower on and drop the back chute. Since the baler and tractor straddles the windrow, the bales dropped on the ground from previous rounds never interferes with the operation.

Reason #4 Gauge wheels are mounted on both sides for better performance. Not so with conventional balers

Reason #5 Our pickup is half the height of conventional belers This means less leaves are lost because less travel distance up and over the pickup is required. An optional hydraulic pickup lift is even available.

Reason #6 Conventional balers use high maintenance cross feeders or sweep arms to move hay to the chamber. Our baler feeds hay from the pickup straight into the chamber by the use of a simple stuffer mechanism. Leaves don't fall to the bottom of the chamber and later fall out the back. Due to our design, leaves are placed evenly throughout the bale — the leaves are not given time to settle to the bottom.

Reason #7 Due to our design, our plunger stroke distance is 25-30% less than conventional balers. Example: John Deere 327, 337, 347 and 467 Models = 30" stroke; Case IH 8520 = 21.6" stroke and a high of 23" on our 8550. The result: Less wear, less side to side stress force and less repairs!

Reason #8 The clearance of our needles from the ground far exceeds conventional balers due to the high position of our chamber. This translates to less breakage and bending of the needles due to hitting high places in the field, etc.

Reason #9 We have equal baler weight distribution on both carrying wheels for easier handling and less side pull on hills

Reason #10 The distance from the end of our bale chamber to the thrower belts is enough so that the thrower doesn't fight the bale; i.e., the bale is not still wedged in the chamber when the thrower first contacts the bale

Reason #11 Our bale edges are sharp and corners are square on all types of hay - excellent when stackers are used or hay is hauled by truck

Reason #12 Proven and reliable Deering type knotters on all center line balers.

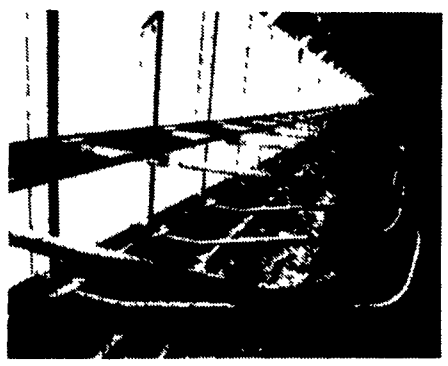
Show-Ease Free Stall



The free hanging free stall uses a heavy horizontal angle which is strong enough without a retaining rail but it may be used.

All Show-Ease free stalls are now made from Hot Dipped Galvanized pipe with the same weight as Schedule 40 pipe only 30% stronger. We think these are the strongest on the market.

REMEMBER THE 3 LAWS OF HOOBER RECONDITIONED AXIAL-FLOW COMBINES...

LAW #1- (17) Years Old is not equal to (≠) WORN OUT...
Because of the simple design of the CASE IH Axial Flow Combines, they can be reconditioned by HOOBER'S expert combine mechanics to like-new condition, so they provide 2nd and 3rd owners years of satisfactory and profitable operation.

LAW #2- (4,000) HOURS PLUS (+) HOOBER RECONDITIONING EQUALS (=) YEARS OF DEPENDABLE SERVICE...
(4,000) Hours on a conventional combine usually means they'll be too much trouble to be dependable. Axial-Flow combines with (4,000) hours, reconditioned by HOOBER'S, have proven to run for years when purchased by farmers in PA, MD, DE and NJ

LAW #3- A CASE IH AXIAL-FLOW COMBINE SERVICED BY EXPERT HOOBER COMBINE MECHANICS EQUALS (=) LITTLE OR NO DOWNTIME DURING HARVEST...
When Hoober's expert combine mechanics service and repair AXIAL-FLOW combines in the off-season, they run dependably through the season.

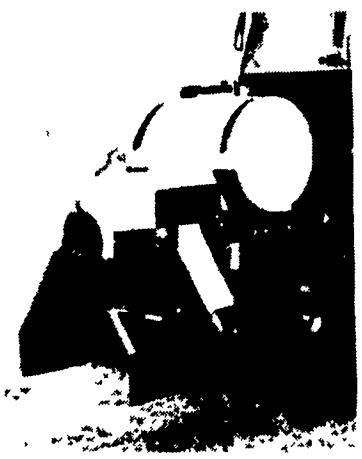
AG-AIR MIST SPRAYER

The Closer You Look - The Better We Look



FRUITS & VEGETABLES

Many producers/growers have sprayed their crops with Ag-Air Mist Sprayers. They have reported excellent results and in half the time in such crops as sweet corn, tomatoes, cabbage, onions, cucumbers, strawberries, peppers, melons, grapes, cranberries, raspberries, wild blueberries and edible beans. For vegetable fungicides and insecticides, they are using approximately 1-2 gallons of total spray per acre at swath width ranging from 40' to 60'. With vine crops such as melons, cucumbers, pumpkins and grapes, the Mist Sprayer will deposit spray droplets on the underside of the leaves. This is next to impossible with a conventional boom sprayer or aerial spraying. With a Mist Sprayer there are no streaks or missed spots as in aerial spraying and 100% better control of the chemical and its target area with proper application and bordering.

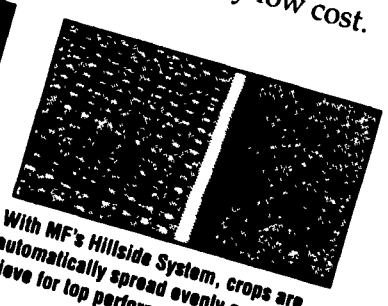
Level your fields without leveling your combine.

The brilliantly simple Dynamic Hillside Compensation System, optional on MF 8400 conventional combines, gives you "flat land" performance on slopes up to 20 degrees. All automatically. And all at a surprisingly low cost. Stop in today for all the details.

Without Hillside System, crops overload the lower side of the sieve, causing high losses and low sample quality.



With MF's Hillside System, crops are automatically spread evenly across the sieve for top performance.
